Treasury Blocks Seizure Of Foreign Ships

WASHINGTON, June 28.—(By the United Press)—Foreign ships bringing liquor inside the three-mile limit of the United States in violation of the prohibition laws will not be seized, Acting Secretary of the Treasury Gilbert declared in an official statement today.

Gilbert's statement follows:

While seizure of foreign ships would be authorized under the law and it has been suggested by prohibition officials, the treasury has not given consideration to such a step at this time and it does not believe that such drastic action will be necessary to control the situation.

Daugherty Secures Quashing Of Indictments

WASHINGTON, June 28.—(By the Associated Press)—The department of justice announced today that Attorney General Daugherty had moved in federal court at Indianapolis to quash the long pending indictments returned there against union leaders and certain corporations charging conspiracy to restrain trade in the production and sale of bituminous coal.

Careful investigation, Mr. Daugherty told the court, strongly supported the protests of the defendants that many of the things complained of were in no small manner due to the efforts of government officials during the war to bring about more intensive co-operation between the operators, miners and railroads in the production and transportation of coal.

Conditions agreed upon between the operators and miners, the cost further was informed, "were the source of official action on the part of the council of national defense, the department of justice, the federal trade commission, the director general of railroads and indeed the then president of the United States in an effort which was claimed, on their part, to be for the purpose of stimulating the production of coal."

The attorney general added that if the case came to trial, "it would be difficult, if not impossible, for the (Continued On Page Thirteen)

The cut of cars attached to the engine shoved the street car completely over and crushed passengers beneath a box car which was piled on top of the trolley car.

Motorman Alva Allison and Conductor Collins were detained by police pending an investigation of the accident.

Those injured are:

Frank H. Nagy, William Lowe, J. W. Gerlitz, Mrs. M. Zouloff, a Miss Morgan, J. V. Dressel, Mrs. Harry Dunder, James Baker, O. E. Osborn, and a man named Goyne.

Mr s. Buzzi Convicted Of Murder In First Degree

NEW YORK, June 28.—(By the Associated Press)—Convicted of first degree murder and facing the electric chair, Mrs. Anna Buzzi, slayer of Frederick Schneider, wealthy Bronx contractor, with whom she lived for several years, collapsed in court late last night when the jury brought in its verdict after deliberating ten hours. White and shaking and with her composure broken for the first time since her arrest four months ago, Mrs. Buzzi was committed to the Bronx county jail to await sentence on July 9.

The penalty for first degree murder in this state is execution by electric chair. Mrs. Buzzi was found dead in his apartment house with two bullets in his brain on a lonely road in the Bronx on February 26.

The case went to the jury at noon yesterday. With the exception of taking two hours for dinner, they did not leave the chambers until the verdict was reached.

Following a demonstration, Justice O'Malley had the court room cleared before the jury appeared.

Mrs. Buzzi, summoned from the jail, came in smiling and appearing in high spirits. Then the verdict was read. A dazed expression came over her face and as she sagged forward attendants caught her and assisted her to a chair. She was revived quickly and aided by matrons, returned to her cell to await sentence, composure and discussed with her attorneys steps for an appeal.

Mrs. Buzzi is the sixth woman to be convicted of first degree murder in New York State. Mrs. Martha Place was put to death in Sing Sing in 1899 and Mary Farmer in 1900. Two women convicted before the electric chair were hanged. Harriet Dixon, a negro, was sentenced to death in 1920, but her sentence was commuted to life imprisonment by Governor Smith. Mrs. Buzzi is the third woman convicted in New York this year by a male jury of killing a man.

CLEVELAND, O., June 28.—(By the Associated Press)—Addressing the brokers' divisional meeting, Frank Ryan, of Los Angeles, sounded the key note of the national association of the real estate boards, when he urged constant war on the shyster real estate man, observation of a code of ethics, continual education of the broker and the gradual raising of the business to the level of a profession.

"Ninety per cent of all ethical standards is bound up closely in just one thing—common, simple, every day honesty of purpose of acts—he said. "We don't need to apologize for our business because of the acts of a few crooks, any more than do the lawyers and physicians of the acts of some shysters in some of those professions."

Harding Invades Borah's Bailiwick

POCAHELLO, IDAHO, June 28.—(By the Associated Press)—Declaring the American people "ought to give of their influence to direct the world to a place where there will be less of war," President Harding carried into Idaho, the home of Senator Borah today an appeal for American membership in the permanent court of international justice.

Making the first of his two Idaho speeches, the president said he would "a thousand times rather entrust the adjustment of a dispute in which America is interested to the permanent court of international justice with American representation there than to any arbitration body set up in the world."

ON BOARD PRESIDENT HARDING'S SPECIAL, June 28.—(By the Associated Press)—President Harding today went into Idaho, the home state of Senator Borah, who often has been approved and sometimes denounced for his policies. There also was especial interest in the nature of the two addresses the president has promised to make in the state, one at noon at Pocatello, and the other late in the day at Idaho Falls. Both of the speeches will be extemporaneous.

Among the official members of the presidential party there was curiosity as to whether the president would touch upon the world court question as he has in a number of the informal addresses thus far made on the trip. Senator Borah has been outspoken in his opposition to the proposal for admission to the court.

Borah To Join Him

The president will not visit Boise, Senator Borah's home city, but word was received today that Senator Borah planned to greet Mr. Harding on his arrival at Pocatello and accompany him to Idaho Falls. Governor Moore, according to the program of the day's activities on boarding the train, is to introduce the president at both cities. Introduction of the president by the state governors has been the rule throughout the trip into the west.

Senator Borah also has said word that he would join the party at Pocatello. Among the things on the program for the day will be a tour of the city of the presidential party.

Makes Deep Impression

The visit to Southern Utah and to Zion National Park, the newest of the nation's play grounds, made a deep impression on both the President and Mrs. Harding.

"We have had a very wonderful day today," Mr. Harding said in many ways," the president said in addressing citizens of Cedar City last night after returning from the 125 mile trip into Zion Park. "We have come to have a new love for the beautiful. We have seen exhibited the results of nature's convulsive moods and then in the canyons and gorges and other aspects of Utah's magnificent scenery we have seen the effect of her relaxing force operating throughout the ages. With it all I think we have come to have, perhaps, even a greater reverence for the Creator, a new wonderment at His purposes, and a new curiosity to know when we ourselves are going to understand fully God's purposes."

Wonderful Day

If it was a wonderful day for the president, it was equally wonderful to the people of Southern Utah, some of the youngest of whom saw their first passenger train when the presidential train arrived at Cedar City over the just completed extension of the Union Pacific from Lund to that city. Many, including even the pioneers, who went into the desert and mountain region years ago, saw in Mr. Harding the first president they ever had seen.

FLOOD OF IMMIGRANTS READY TO POUR INTO U.S.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—(By the United Press)—We will handle the situation satisfactorily, said W. W. Husland, commissioner general of immigration, following a conference of immigration officials to complete plans for meeting the flood of aliens that will swarm to American shores.

July 1. A total of 357,803 immigrants will be admitted to the United States during the fiscal year beginning July 1. The same aggregate number as admitted during the fiscal year just closed.

About 17,000 third class passengers who are immigrants that must be detained for examination, will reach the shores of the United States on July 1. Ten thousand immigrants will arrive at Ellis Island, 4,000 at Boston, 2,300 at Philadelphia, 800 at Providence and 800 at Portland, Me.

DETROIT, MICH., June 28.—(By the United Press)—Immigration officials here today prepared for the unprecedented rush of immigrants through the port of Detroit beginning July 1st, when the new immigration year begins.

Hundreds of home seekers from the British possessions, Italy, Russia,

Turkey, Armenia and Middle European countries have been camped on the Canadian side of the border and will rush for the local immigration offices. A majority of those seeking entrance to the United States through Detroit will be disappointed, according to Dr. Prentiss, chief of immigration here. Of the 15,468 foreigners who may enter the United States each month of the new year, Detroit's quota will be but a few hundred, while the immigrants waiting entrance here are said to number from 3,000 to 8,000, according to Dr. Prentiss.

He has discovered that local issues were so striking that they indirectly affected the choice of senators and representatives in many sections of the country. Feeling dissatisfied with the existing order, the electorate registered its protest in every conceivable way, without exactly knowing where the responsibility for the high cost of everything began or ended.

Cut Down Expenses, Harding Tells People

BY DAVID LAWRENCE (Copyright 1923 By The Portsmouth Times)

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, June 28.—President Harding disclosed in his speeches here a well defined objective to influence the state, county, and municipal governments of the whole country to economize.

In some respects the address which the president delivered here was the most important of his trip for it cut at the heart of the political unrest of the nation—the burdens of taxation. Mr. Harding has found out one thing

Threatens To Place Troops In Every County Of The State

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., June 28.—(By the Associated Press)—Further military steps in Governor I. C. Walton's drive to rid Oklahoma of "lawless mobs," will depend on whether whippings, assaults and other forms of violence cease, it was said today at the executive office. With law enforcement in Oklahoma county in the hands of national guardsmen and four other counties under the threat of martial law, the governor made it plain that he was ready to go the limit in order to suppress mob activities.

He reiterated that he was prepared to place troops in charge of every county if necessary to bring about a proper respect for law.

Whippings and assaults reaching an "appalling number" have gone unpunished, the governor declared, because local authorities "are too often allied with these secret, lawless mobs."

Roy Crane, self-styled "ex-priest," was prevented from delivering an advertised anti-Catholic address in Oklahoma last night by order of the military authorities. He is said to have held a meeting in a pasture just over the Muskogee county line, where Oklahoma citizens followed to hear him.

$2,500,000 To Be Spent By Anti Saloon League

WESTERVILLE, O., June 28.—(By the Associated Press)—Expenditure of $2,500,000 in the 1924 political campaign in an effort to prevent election of wet candidates is planned by the Anti-Saloon League of America, according to National officers of the organization who are here attending a conference of state superintendents.

Particular attention is to be paid to congressional candidates it was said, a majority of the superintendents expressing the belief that presidential nominees of the two major parties will be acceptable to the league.

An educational campaign for prohibition enforcement, to be carried out by extensive publicity in newspapers and other publications, by use of films and hundreds of speakers is to form part of the program.

Resolutions declaring for an extension of the three mile limit coastal limit and setting forth the right of the United States to uphold its laws in its territorial waters as regards alien vessels will come before the conference today.

Superintendents of 44 state organizations are attending the conference which closes today. The executive committee of the Anti-Saloon League will meet here tomorrow.

Opposes Army As Dry Agents

WASHINGTON, June 28.—(By the Associated Press)—Flat opposition to any project for using the army to do prohibition enforcement work was voiced here today by Secretary Weeks speaking at the graduation exercises at the army war college.

"I cannot believe," he said, "that persons who advocate unusual punishment for the army, such as enforcement of prohibition, have given serious thought to the possible outcome of such a practice."

The war secretary said he was opposed to the use of the army for enforcement of civil laws unless all civil police power shall have been exhausted and there results that state of "insurrection and rebellion" which federal law provides shall alone justify the use of troops in affording the protection guaranteed to state governments by the constitution.

"In fact," he said, "concess with a full knowledge of the dangers and abuses which had arisen as a result of the use of the army in augmentation of the civil police power, saw fit to pass the act forbidding the participation of even a single member of the military establishment in 'posse comitatus.' The reasons for that legislation appears to me now to be as sound as when enacted."

"Dry Sponge Mopping Up"

WASHINGTON, June 28.—(By the Associated Press)—American consumers of alcohol have had 250,000,000 gallons less during the last three years of national prohibition. Commissioner Haynes said in a statement issued today, that he had in the previous three pre-Volstead years. Figures showing how the sponge of national prohibition has mopped up liquor supplies. Commissioner Haynes set forth that total withdrawals of alcohol, whiskey and other spirits during three years of prohibition aggregated only $2,503,164 gallons compared with 335,000,418 gallons during the three preceding years.

During the last ten months, Commissioner Haynes said, records of liquor withdrawals show only a third as much taken out as those of the preceding year. He said that withdrawals in the first four months of the present calendar year were less than half of those of the same period of 1922, totalling respectively, 3,358,216 and 8,654,734 gallons.

Whitfield Denies Guilt

CLEVELAND, O., June 28.—(By the Associated Press)—Arraignment of John L. Whitfield on a charge of the first degree murder of Dennis Griffin, a Cleveland policeman, was set for today. Previous plans were to arraign him on the indictment tomorrow morning, but County Prosecutor Stanton decided to advance the arraignment when the police turned over the prisoner sooner than was expected.

Whitfield was placed in the county jail last night about four hours after he was brought back from Detroit, where he was arrested Tuesday. The police had contemplated questioning him all night in an effort to wring from him a confession, but when Whitfield made a voluntary statement of what happened on the morning of May 11, the date Patrolman Griffin disappeared, the police abandoned the idea.

In the statement, which police sur Whitfield signed, he admitted for the first time that he knew Griffin was dead when he fell from the roadster in which Griffin was accompanying Whitfield to a police station after having arrested him on charges of larceny. However, he steadfastly contends he did not shoot Griffin.

Whitfield, said Griffin had placed a revolver against Whitfield's ribs, and, when, angered, he knocked it away, the weapon was discharged. He denied any knowledge of how the body was buried in a shallow grave in a woods about 25 miles east of here.

An armed guard will be kept constantly over the prisoner, who occupies a cell which can be watched from three directions.

Letters From Our Readers

Editor Times—

I always read your editorials and as a rule like them very much, as they indicate that you are keeping up with the times, as an American editor. But your effort, "Reaping the Harvest," gives the lie to your previous write-ups. When you advised your readers that the eighteenth amendment was a part of the constitution of the United States government and should be obeyed. This is not a wet and dry issue. Just a question of obeying the law. The English prime minister is quoted as saying that we had the right to apply our law. Also Lloyd George said we were within our rights. About tea and coffee, you are suffering with heat. Why should an American citizen be required to obey the law and an Englishman and a French bunch of booze drinkers be allowed to break it. You are the only one I have heard of that is afraid of England or France getting even with us. They tried that before and found that America was always able to take care of herself. You have a right to be wet if you care to. But come clean and stand by the old flag, the only flag.

Respectfully

Disabled War Veteran Makes Sensational Charges

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 28.—(By the Associated Press)—With a charge made on the floor of the convention of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War that a certain member of the Veterans' Association had declared that he could obtain funds from one of the great political parties in exchange for political support, a lively session is expected today.

The statement was made yesterday by Judge Robert S. Marx, of the superior court of Cincinnati, chairman of the finance committee of the association.

Judge Marx later declined to say from which party the funds were available or to comment further. He made the charge while giving his report as chairman of the finance committee. It followed a statement that at times it was the duty of the committee to refuse offers for help as well as to refuse demands for money.

"I think in all fairness," he told the delegates, "it is my duty to say to you that a high ranking member of this association proposed some months ago that he could obtain funds to carry on the work of this organization from one of the political parties of this country in return for our support of certain policies of that party."

Did Not Want To Kill His Victim

LANCASTER, O., June 28.—(By the Associated Press)—Frederick C. Mills, Akron, the 16-year-old boys' industrial school inmate, who is in the county jail here awaiting the sitting of the grand jury, having been bound over from the juvenile court by Judge Van A. Snyder, under $10,000 bond on the charge of murder in the first degree for the killing of Officer John H. Karschner yesterday, made a confession of the crime to officers of the institution in which he was held.

"I did not think of killing Mr. Karschner, he was always good to me. I wanted to go home to my mother, and the boys had told me the easiest way to get away was to get an officer's clothes. I found a piece of iron and hid it in the poultry yard until we started to gather the eggs and then I shoved it up my sleeve."

"I intended to hit Mr. Karschner when we were alone in the hen house, but my heart failed me almost and I let the bar slip out of my sleeve and fall on the floor. I was afraid Mr. Karschner would report me so I hurriedly picked up the iron bar and struck him over the head with it. He was dazed but did not fall. I ran outside and locked the door and then crawled back in through a hole and struck him again several times and he fell."

"He begged me not to hit him any more and said he would give me anything he had. He said he had never done anything to me. I told him I was sorry I had hit him."

The tears rolled down the boy's cheeks during his confession.

"I only wanted to knock him out a few minutes. I did not want to kill him."

"The lad, large for his age, stands five feet, nine inches tall, and weighs 145 pounds."

Warning Against Taxation Evils Is Given By Congressman Knight In Fine Address

Sounding a warning against the alarming increase in the number of governmental positions, and the constant tendency on the part of legislators to seek new sources of taxation, the Hon. C. L. Knight of Akron made one of the most interesting addresses ever heard in the city last evening when he talked to the members of the local Exchange club and a number of visitors, the Exchangees observing guest night to give others an opportunity to hear Mr. Knight.

Warning was given by Mr. Knight that the taxpayers and the business men of the country "have been asleep at the switch so far as watching tax measures is concerned, and have allowed the engine to run over them." Undoubtedly all who heard his address will in the future "sit up and take notice" when tax propositions are up for consideration, as Mr. Knight's talk was of such a nature that it could not help arouse interest in the problems discussed, whether or not all agreed with his views.

Among other things Mr. Knight took a shot at what he termed a "fallacy in legislation, the idea that the millennium could be brought about in taxation by piling the taxes high on the rich men, on the manufacturers." He said that this would be a right except for one fact, and that was "that the ones thus taxed always found a way to put the tax back on the ultimate consumer, and thus was started a vicious circle with ever widening circumference."

The speaker lived up to his reputation as a fearless, independent editor and speaker, who has the nerve to express his convictions anywhere.

HELP FOR GIRLS WHO WORK

Mrs. Lodie Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Tyrone, Pa.—"A friend told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her wife, so my husband bought me a bottle because I was so run-down, had a nervous weakness, no strength in my body and pains in my left side so bad that I could hardly do my work. Before I was married I used to work in the factory, and I had pains just the same then as I have had since I have done my housework. I would not be without a bottle in the house now. It has stopped the pains all right and I have found out that it is a wonderful body builder, as it has made me well and strong. It is going to be the 'old reliable' with me hereafter, and I am always willing to tell other women how it has helped me. You can use this letter as you wish as I can honestly say that my words are true."—Mrs. M. Lodie, R.F.D. No. 4, Box 40, Tyrone, Pa.

Letters like this bring out the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They tell of the relief from such pains and ailments after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

HON. CHARLES L. KNIGHT

any time, regardless of what others may think of him. He found a responsive audience last evening, and while undoubtedly there were those who did not agree with all the views expressed by the speaker, yet all were deeply interested in hearing how the various propositions appealed to him. The address was not only instructive and "thought-producing," but Mr. Knight proved to be a speaker who could hold the most intense interest of his audience and take them along with him in the consideration of the most difficult problems of taxation and government, or arouse spontaneous outbursts of laughter with the humorous stories which he used to illustrate various points in his arguments. It was an address that must compel thought concerning the problems of taxation and their influence on the future of the country, and undoubtedly will result in much good.

The burden of Knight's speech was directed at the taxation evils confronting the state and nation. He traced the growth of boards, bureaus and commissions and the attendant increase of government officials which he declared had reached such an alarming number at the present time that one man out of every 22 in the country was on the government payroll (meaning the national, state and municipal payrolls).

He made a strong plea for a referendum as the first step to reform organized politics in the state, which was behind both bills for the sole purpose of plundering the people to create more offices and more office holders.

He dropped a hand grenade on the world court and made a charge all along the line on state socialism.

He described the Taft bill as "that polychrome performance in which a mouse labored and a taxation mountain was born."

"Beginning with Genesis," he said, "it shows us how one taxation patriarch begot another, indicates how the creeping and crawling things entered the Ark two by two and rode out the flood, and thus reaches Revelations in which it is proposed to kill

Mr. Knight Impressed With Ohio Valley

"I have traveled in the Alps, the Apennines, through the far west of the United States, and visited many other countries and districts noted for the beauty of their scenery, but I want to say that nowhere have I found more beautiful scenery than along this Ohio Valley," commented Hon. C. L. Knight, who was in Portsmouth yesterday to address the local Exchange club. "Of course, it is a different kind of beauty from that you may find in the Alps, or elsewhere, but to me it is most appealing."

Mr. Knight, who is a keen business man, rated in the millionaire class, as well as a successful and progressive editor, was also greatly impressed with the industries he saw along the Ohio river, and agrees with those who predict that in the next decade or two this section will be the manufacturing center of the United States.

Another thing that impressed Mr. Knight was that there appeared to him to be great possibilities for raising cattle in this section, and he believes that in the years to come this proposition will receive more and more attention by the farmers in this section.

off the whole brood by the creation of a new animal, that has all the vices and none of the virtues of its ancestors."

"The bill," he said, "proceeded upon the now popular theory that there is no closed season on the taxpayer, but that he may be trapped, snared, or shot as long as the taxpayers and passpayers need his substance to fact out their ribs."

"The measure," he declared, "settled nothing except providing an additional $25,000,000 for the politicians with which to promote more extravagance, more office holders and more contracts."

"The so-called budget system set up under this legislation," he said, "would cost the people of Ohio an additional million each year and would provide them with nothing that they have not now."

"The Albany bill," he said, "was the perfected work of boresmen, down in Cincinnati, sometimes called Cincinnati, where the machinists that wipe and grease the old Cox turbine, list their Packards for $25 apiece and have not had their real estate reassessed in 40 years, the beneficent principles of the idea are well known. It is now sought to extend it to the rest of the state, by placing the assessment of our property in the hands of creatures of the local political bosses. The plan is, of course, that the elected assessor will not do his duty, while the manservant of the machine, responsible to nobody by his boss will. If that theory is correct why not abandon our elections and appoint everybody to office? In the light of such logic it is easy to understand why the organized politics of the state is doing its utmost now to take away from the people their constitutional right to pass upon these questions."

The speaker said it was now up to the people of Ohio to make an example of the taxpayers that would be heeded throughout a nation that is being threatened with destruction by tax.

"A nation," he said, "that is spending annually 18 per cent of its wealth in taxation cannot long endure. It has already resulted in a country where one person out of every 22 is on the nation's payroll. At the present rate of increase, in a few years there will be 125 per cent of the people on the payroll. Where would we get the able patriots to hold the jobs?"

Concerning the world court, he said that he was glad to see, "that the most lovable of all our presidents had been elected to the presidency of the famous French king who won immortality by marching up the hill and then marching down again. We are not to enter this outhouse of the League of Nations by the front, the side, the cellar, nor the trap door. If we get in we are going to scratch under, and by the process of boring from within we hope to give it a character and standing that it sadly needs."

"Thus in the struggle to see whether we are going to take a chance on reforming it or letting it debauch us, we are going to have an opportunity of testing whether the American people have definitely abandoned the ideals of George Washington for those of Herbert Hoover."

In closing Mr. Knight paid a splendid tribute to President Harding's stand for the conservation of wealth as well as of men in future wars, and said that if he pushed this project to a successful issue it would mean that wars would end.

Mr. Knight was accompanied to Portsmouth by his private secretary C. H. Stubbs, and while here they were the guests of the Washington hotel.

Arrangements for the meeting were made by the entertainment committee of the club, Messrs. C. E. Nodder, D. Mitchell and Ralph Legler.

President Russell K. McCurdy presided at the meeting and introduced Mr. Knight as a man who always said exactly what he thought and assured him that it was just this kind of an address that the Portsmouth club wanted to hear. Mr. Knight tried to sit after he had talked three quarters of an hour, but a chorus of "go on's" showed that his entire audience was eager to have him continue.

"What was needed is a lot more of just such straight from the shoulder talks," was an opinion expressed by those present.

Rail Board Charges The Pennsylvania System In Contempt Of Decision Of The Supreme Court

CHICAGO, ILL., June 28.—(By The Associated Press.)—The Pennsylvania Railroad system, after ignoring the decision of the U. S. Railroad Labor Board, in refusing to acknowledge the elected representatives of the clerk's organization, "has persisted in such violation in contempt of the unanimous decision of the United States Supreme Court," which sustained the board's jurisdiction, the board elected today in a decision.

The castigation of the Pennsylvania System—the second of similar nature within 11 days—resulted when the system refused to deal with the elected representatives of the clerk's organization as officials, representing employees' organization, although the system was ready to consider them as individuals.

The board, in its opinion, declared that the position of the Pennsylvania system in this case was "devoid of intrinsic merit, violative of the will of congress, and destructive of the rights of the employees."

"There was no proposal to arbitrarily require the carrier to deal with any particular labor organization," the opinion said. "The only issue was one of such insignificant import to the carrier as to make its flagrant course one of astonishment to disinterested citizens. The issue is hereby stated."

In the following question and answer quoted from the record of the statement at the hearing of a vice-president representing the Pennsylvania system.

"Question: 'Simply drawing this distinction, that, if they will agree to deal with you as individuals, you will deal with them; but, if they deal with you as officials representing employee's organizations you will not deal with them?'

"Answer: 'You have stated it correctly.'"

"In the face of this statement of the carrier's position, the fact remains that the carrier had negotiated agreements with the four train and engine service brotherhoods."

"... which are signed by the officials of those organizations as such and not as individuals. This consistent course involves the admission on the part of the road that it respects the rights of employees when they are backed by the four powerful train and engine brotherhoods, but not when they have only the support of the newer and less potent clerk's organization."

The opinion declares that if the same sort of recognition has been accorded the clerk's organization the Pennsylvania system would "not now find itself in the lone attitude among all the great railroads of the United States of attempting to nullify the transportation act, and that, not in the defense of its rights, but in the oppression of its employees."

The decision of the board also calls attention to the fact that throughout this controversy the employees concerned and their representatives have borne themselves in a manner worthy of commendation. "Deprived of their rights," the opinion continued, "they did not strike and visit their grievances upon the heads of the unoffending public."

Surely the employees of the United States when they recognize that the transportation act provides that a class of employees shall enjoy the right of selecting the representatives of such a class, the decision declared that the "carrier arrogated itself the privilege of treating with contempt the principle of majority representation which is fundamental not only in the transportation act, but throughout the constitution and institutions and laws of our land."

The results of balloting as included in the decision of the board clearly showed that wherever an election was held, the clerk's representatives were overwhelmingly elected, but according to the testimony introduced the Pennsylvania system refused to recognize the elected representatives.

When the attention of the Railroad Labor board was called to this alleged transgression by the carrier of a provision of the transportation act, the board called a hearing. Testimony was introduced by the railroad and the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, freight handlers, and express employees.

But before the board could render a decision in the case the Pennsylvania system applied for and received an injunction restraining the board from issuing its decision. The fight was taken to the United States supreme court, which sustained the board's contentions, overruled those of the carrier and ordered the injunction dissolved.

Dear Dolly—I am coming to you for your opinion on this question. I am a girl of fifteen and of medium size. I have such terribly thick hair, and have had it bobbed once. It is now around my neck and should be cut again, but my mother does not approve. It is so thick and uncomfortable this hot weather. I don't know what to do. I might have it cut without her consent, but she may call a row about it. What do you think? She says nice girls don't have bobbed hair.

SOCIAL NEWS

Relative to the marriage of Mr. Emerson Kugelmann of this city to Miss Helen Marie Volt of Warren, O., the Warren Chronicle of local interest said:

"Tall standards of blue jasper and peonies in American beauty shades, set among ferns and palms, formed the setting in Central Christian Church Wednesday afternoon for the wedding of Miss Helen Marie Volt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Volt, of Warren, Ohio, to Mr. Emerson Kugelmann, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Kugelmann of Portsmouth."

"At twenty minutes before the hour of five o'clock, Mrs. Cora Harwood Brown, at the organ, and Carl F. Scheig, violin, broke into the first strains of the 'Maid of Love' (Engelmann). The organ and violin program continued with 'Love's Song' (Cadmian) and 'The Venetian Love Song' (Schubert), after which Mrs. Chester Bradford of this city sang with violin obligato, 'At Dawning' (Cadmian) and 'I Love You Truly' by Carrie Jacobs Bond. To herald the bride party, Mrs. Brown played the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin and during the ceremony, impromptu strains, softly."

"Nearly three hundred guests witnessed the ceremony, which was solemnized by the Rev. J. M. Van Horn, who had officiated at a June day of the bride's parents on a June day, who walked with her father, was preceded by her maid of honor, Mari-belle Sutton, and her two sisters, Miss Olive and Miss Elizabeth Volt, bridesmaids. Clifford Connell of Portsmouth dispatched the duties of best man, and the ushers were Charles Kugelmann of Portsmouth and Michael Conway, Warren."

"The bride, who is stately and blonde, was lovely in a creation of white Canton crepe, crystal beaded, and made with panels and drapery to form an unbroken line. Her full length veil was worn with a beaded band and she carried white roses and larkspur, showered with ribbons. Miss Sutton wore burnt orange georgette, with hat to match, and carried Columbia roses, while Miss Olive Volt was gowned in green georgette, and Miss Elizabeth Volt in orange. Both bridesmaids to match their gowns and carried sunburst roses and larkspur."

"Following the ring ceremony, Mrs. Brown struck the notes of the recessional from Mendelssohn, and the wedding party and one hundred guests repaired to the Volt home, on Porter avenue, where a wedding dinner was served, in charge of Mrs. George Sutton. Two tables, in which appointments were emphasized by roses and larkspur, the same French-like combinations being used throughout the home."

"With members of the bridegroom's family from Portsmouth, his father and brother and family, Mrs. Charles Kugelmann and daughter, Katherine, out-of-town guests, including Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Myers and Fred and Mrs. Joseph Myers of Sharon; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Byers of Columbus; Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Benedict, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Ralston, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Rantz and Miss Helen Stiles, Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wenden, Youngstown; and Miss Florence Koehler of Millersburg."

"Mrs. Kugelmann, a member of one of Warren's representative families, has been a much-loved bride-elect, and the daughter of handsome gifts attests to her popularity. She is a graduate of the Warren schools and of the Warren business college and a year ago closed a four years' connection as book-keeper for the McCluer Lumber company. Mr. Kugelmann holds a responsible position with the Trumbull Steel company and since coming to Warren has won friends. He already large circle of friends. He is affiliated with the Elks and Masonic bodies."

Hair Often Ruined by Careless Washing

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it. The best thing for steady use is Mulsified coconut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

Two or three teaspoonfuls is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage. You can get Mulsified coconut oil shampoo at any drug store; it is inexpensive, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

While the sailing arrow was speeding through the air, Jack Daw was also doing some very fast traveling. Trislie had explained that in order to keep up with the arrow they would all have to put on flying shoes and use these that carried Jack and the rest along.

"There is our arrow, now," shouted Cucumber, as the flying shoes carried him close to the arrow. And it was just at this moment that Jack felt his flying shoes slipping. Trislie, too, saw that they were coming off and she told Jack to grab the arrow. He did, just in time.

"Hang on," shouted Trislie. "I can't keep this tight hold long," replied Jack, "for the arrow is going too fast." Then Trislie caught Jack's flying shoes as they sailed through the air alone. "Just a minute and I'll help you," she shouted to Jack. (Continued.)

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

"RUBY JOAN'S EYES"

"Tick-ets, please!" he called out.

BACK to the little train went Nancy and Nick. Nancy was carrying Ruby Joan and Nick, if you please, was carrying the lost money that had run off with Ruby Joan, or (to tell you the right way of it) that had taken her to Lost Town to look for her poor lost shoe-button eyes.

"It was very queer," said the lost dolly, when they were all seated in the little Choo-Choo Express train and Mister Toots had started the engine. "We were just playing as nice as pie in the yard when—"

"Who was playing?" asked Nancy. "Was Pupper and I were playing," said Ruby Joan, "when all at once his teeth went into my head and I heard a rip and then I couldn't see any more. My eyes were gone."

"I'm awfully sorry," said the puppy. "I didn't mean to hurt her. It was only in fun."

"Well, it's funny we couldn't find your eyes in Lost Town," said Nick. "We've looked everywhere and asked everybody but they weren't there."

Just then Mister Punch, the conductor-man, came along to punch the tickets. "Tick-ets, please," he called out. "No, no charge for babies or doggies—they ride free. I'm very glad you found your lost child, Madam!"

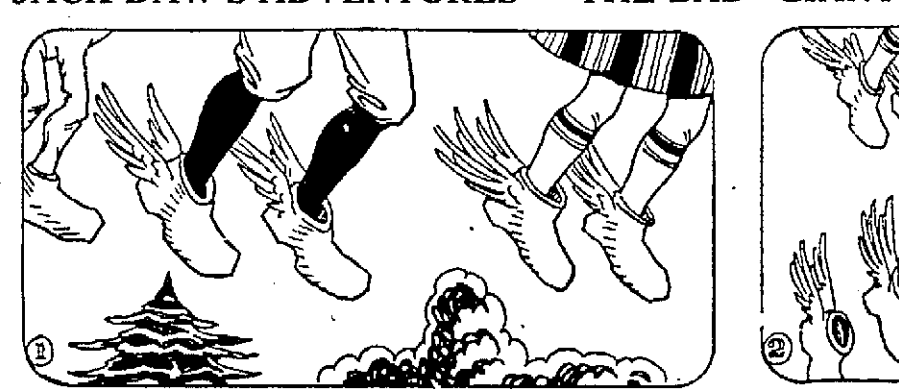

"So am I, thank you," said Nancy happily, "but I'll have to take her to a doctor's. She has such a hole in her poor head." And she stuck in her finger just to show him how bad it was. Ruby Joan was injured.

"Oh, goodness!" she gasped. "I've got something. It's her two eyes! They weren't lost at all! They were just inside her head. Why, I can fix them in a minute with a needle and thread!"

Which she did at once. (To Be Continued)

WHY YOU NEED IRON

To make you strong and "brave" and put the power into your blood to overcome disease germs

The food you eat contains carbon. When your food is digested it is absorbed from the intestines into the blood. When the carbon in your food comes in contact with the oxygen carried by the iron in your blood, the carbon and oxygen unite and by so doing they give off tremendous energy, thereby giving you great force, strength and endurance. Without iron your blood carries no oxygen and without oxygen there is nothing to unite with the carbon in your food, so that what you eat does you no good—you do not get any strength from it. It is like putting coal into a stove without a fire. You cannot get any heat unless the coal unites with the fire.

The strongest weapon with which the prevent and overcome colds, pneumonia, kidney trouble, rheumatism, nervous prostration, and almost any disease or disease germs is plenty of good rich, pure blood, strength, energy and endurance and the only way to get this is by taking Nuxated Iron. Nuxated Iron is the only iron which people usually take, because it is so easy to take and it is so effective. It is known as Nuxated Iron because it is known to be had from almost any drug store. Nuxated Iron often increases the strength, energy and endurance of weak, nervous, rundown folks in two weeks time.

It has been used and highly recommended by former United States Senators, members of Congress, judges of courts, many physicians, and prominent men.

Over 4,000,000 people are now using it. Its factory results are guaranteed or the manufacturers will refund your money. Sold by all druggists in tablet form only.

Cut Down

giving up a diet which is even bigger in proportionate growth than the federal debt. The statistics which were revealed by the president have for some time been under discussion in Washington by the inner circle and the president chose as a topic for his speech the subject of taxation not because he could promise immediately any reduction in federal taxes but because he thinks the states and cities are spending too much money and the federal government is getting blamed for it by unthinking voters.

States Have Increased Debts

The states have increased their debts to a total of more than a billion dollars while the debts of 27 cities has gone up to nearly four and a half billion. The figures in both instances are for 1921 and the president says frankly he hasn't the data as to what happened since but he doesn't think the states and cities are cutting down their debts by very much and he points proudly to the record of the federal government which since the war steadily reduced the public debt so that this month it is about 22 and a half billions or a cut of about five billions.

On the matter of taxes paid, however, the president did have later figures and he emphasized the fact that in 1922 the state and local taxes constituted sixty per cent of the nation's entire tax burden.

Mr. Harding impressed his audience with the comparison he made of taxes paid by American citizens and taxes of other countries. He showed that while the American with a $5,000 income pays an income tax of $65, the German of similar income pays 292 and the Frenchman $36 and the Briton $200. Some of the critics will say, of course, that other expenses—such as the cost of living—are cheaper in Europe and that the case of the man with a $5,000 income doesn't touch the real difficulties of America's tax problem, as compared with Europe's, where it is contended the burden is more evenly distributed so that business is not strangled and retarded by high taxes.

Still Mr. Harding was striving to reach the average man and convince him that his tax burden is not so heavy after all and that the states and cities are exacting more from him than is the federal government.

From a political angle the president's tactics were well chosen but from the viewpoint of the economist there always will be much controversy over the exact part that the tax burden plays in increasing the cost of the necessities of the life. The European countries have not tried to make the present generation pay too heavily but have recognized the fact that taxation can restrict a nation's growth at the same time that its credit reputation may be enhanced by heavy taxation.

Mr. Harding called upon the citizenry of the nation to practice thrift and insisted that state and county and city governments do likewise. The federal government had some control indirectly during the war in state and local expenditures. Mr. Harding in his Denver speech recalled the precedent set by President Roosevelt in calling the governors of the states together to get cooperation between the federal government and the states. In his speeches thus far Mr. Harding has developed the doctrine of closer working arrangements between Washington and the several states of the union. Already a conference has been called to discuss prohibition enforcement by the states and federal government. Maybe there will be another on taxes.

The president has presented indeed a second problem with "concurrent" aspects and that's taxation and state and city borrowing. The president failed to mention one reason why the states and cities have been spending so much—the ease with which they can borrow money from their securities exempt from federal taxation. At least several states have been able to raise the money sorely needed for local improvement to keep pace with the growth of population and to catch up with the many projects left uncompleted during the war and immediately thereafter.

Mr. Harding has opened a subject which the local politicians will not permit to go unanswered. Local candidates have always found high taxes a good issue but when the president criticizes the states and cities and counties in comparison with the federal government he reveals a new avenue of approach to the numerous political situations which have in recent years been causing local upheavals and influencing national elections.

Charged With Failing To Provide For Three Children

Frank Henry, 42 years old, arrested on a warrant charging him with abandoning his three minor children, was bound over to the grand jury under $1,000 bond at a preliminary hearing in Municipal court yesterday. The complaint was filed by Mrs. Emma Culp, who is the defendant's former wife, and she claimed that he skipped out to avoid the payment of $6 a week ordered by the court at the time she was granted a divorce, declaring that he had not contributed one penny to the support of his children during his absence of more than ten years. Henry claimed that his earnings were not sufficient to pay the $6 a week alimony, although he admitted that he had since remarried and was supporting his wife and two children.

Henry was apprehended when he returned here a couple of days ago to visit relatives and was taken into custody at the home of a relative at Hastings Hill, Sciotoville.

Portsmouth Shows Up Well In In The Building Of New Houses

Washington Bureau, The Portsmouth Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 28.—Portsmouth in 1922 was far ahead of other cities of its size in meeting the housing needs of its population, even though it is still short of the building average established by the Department of Labor, Commissioner Ethelbert Stewart of the Bureau of Statistics of the United States Department of Labor announced here today.

This announcement was made in connection with a statement that the Bureau of Labor Statistics is giving a new and rather interesting turn to the statistical records of building and building permits, with the ultimate object of providing a formula that will enable each community in the United States to determine in advance how many new homes should be provided to take care of the normal growth of population.

Using the basis it has evolved for this purpose, the Bureau declares that Portsmouth last year built at the rate of 794 families per ten thousand population.

To provide for a normal increase of families, as determined by marriage statistics, says Commissioner Stewart, there should have been erected in Portsmouth last year accommodations for not less than 105 families for each 10,000 population. This ratio he declares to be necessary if the ideal housing situation is to be maintained.

The records show that accommodations for 261 Portsmouth families were provided in 1922, as compared with 113 in 1921. The 1921 ratio was only 34.2 per 10,000, which shows that the housing situation in Portsmouth has improved by leaps and bounds in the last 18 months.

The improvement for 1922, while not large, holds hope in Commissioner Stewart's opinion, that Portsmouth, in common with other cities, will eventually be on a purely scientific basis as regards home construction.

The Bureau of Statistics, says Stewart, for several years has been endeavoring to find out how the increase in possible family residence is keeping pace with the annual increase in the number of families as the result of marriages and the increase resulting from movement of country families to the city.

When this is worked out, the element of speculation will be removed from his important municipal activity. Rents will be more stable and investments more secure, Mr. Stewart thinks. Before citizens with capital can be induced to put it into homes, he says, they will first desire to know whether there is any real demand for them. This knowledge can be obtained with almost clock-like precision, declares the commissioner.

Prior to the war, Mr. Stewart points out, there were about 105 marriages each year for each 10,000 of population, taking the country as a whole. During and since the war the number has been much higher.

A marriage does not necessarily mean that a new home will be estab-

Stewart says that apartment houses have begun to invade even the small towns. In 1921, he says, 72 per cent of the families accommodated in cities under 100,000 population were in one family dwellings, while in 1922 the percentage had fallen to 62. In cities of over 100,000 population the percentage fell from 70.9 in 1921 to 49.3 in 1922.

L. P. Mader Returns From Convention

L. P. Mader, decorator and card writer at the Anderson Bros. Co. department store, has just returned from Cleveland where he attended the twenty-sixth annual convention of the International Association of Display Men, of which he is a member. Mr. Mader has been a member of this organization a number of years and never misses the conventions which he says are of tremendous value to window decorators.

Mr. Mader's graduation from the Koster School and his work at the Art Institute in Chicago, together with his wide and practical experience in decorating, has won him a place among the progressive display men of the state, and those who have observed the high tone of Anderson's window displays can well understand the reason.

While at the convention, Mr. Mader purchased several hundred dollars worth of decorations for his windows and also for interior use.

his plans for store decoration for fall are already under way and Anderson's patrons are due for a pleasant surprise in September when Style Week ushers in the new season.

While on his trip, Mr. Mader visited other cities, examining store windows, getting ideas that might be of benefit in making proposed changes in the Anderson store front.

That's what every merchant in Portsmouth is doing daily and will continue to do until we have decent roads into the city. Some people will tell you this and some one else "that" about why that paving is delayed, but just start a little private investigation of your own and you may learn why it isn't being done.

About the only thing we have gotten for the past year is excuses and promises but the road isn't paved yet and "our debtour" Geo—I wish I could hide in our preacher's auto and have him drive over that detour just to see how often he would justifiably forget he was a preacher and if he did forget b-e-l-i-e-v-e M-e I would go to church next Sunday and Monday I would send him a pair of those pure calf black or tan oxfords that we are selling for seven berries—with my compliments.

On Rampage—Murders Three

GALVESTON, TEXAS, June 28.—Shooting to death three men and wounding a fourth in the space of two minutes is the record of S. Thetios, second officer of the Shipping Board Steamer "Brave Coeur." Unpublished details of the tragedy, which ended in the suicide of Thetios, were received here by letter today from H. Grotemat, chief engineer of the ship.

Thetios was on watch at the time of the shooting, according to the letter. He left the bridge about two p. m. on June 6, secured a gun, went to the room of Captain J. N. Neilson and shot him, also radio operator A. Glaiser, who was talking to the captain. He then went to the room of John L. Perry, who was asleep, and killed him.

The second officer then fired at Otto Hausler, a seaman, wounding him several times. Thetios retired to his room barricading himself therein and efforts to dislodge him were futile. Only two minutes were consumed in the shooting.

The "Brave Coeur" was headed for Oporto, Portugal, at full speed. On arrival at the port the American consul tried to persuade Thetios to surrender without result. Lime was dropped into Thetios' room through the ventilator and as soon as it began to take effect, he shot himself through the mouth, lingering in the hospital until the afternoon of June 7.

No motive for Thetios' action is known, the letter states, as the men shot, with the exception of the captain, were most intimate with him. The "Brave Coeur" with the body of the captain, supercargo and wireless operator is due to reach Galveston about July 1.

Man-Woman Held For Murder

CHICAGO, June 28.—Fred Thompson, the masquerading man-woman, charged with being the "smiling" woman bandit who shot and killed Richard Tesmer, today was ordered held to the grand jury on the charge of murder by the coroner's jury investigating Tesmer's death.

The jury also recommended that, if the male companion of the "smiling" bandit is arrested, he be held on a similar charge.

Thompson was attired again in the female clothing which he wore when arrested in the apartment of Frank Carrick, where he is said to have lived as the wife of Carrick and the husband of Marie Clark. He had been forced into male attire at the jail.

Mrs. Tesmer, the widow, testified that Thompson was the "woman" who killed her husband. Tesmer was shot as he and his wife were held up at their garage, the "woman" and male bandits escaping in the Tesmer auto.

Mrs. Tesmer was on the verge of a nervous collapse as she took the stand in the inquest. Frank McDonnell, defense attorney, demanded that the inquest be postponed until Mrs. Tesmer was in a more normal state that would permit questioning. She was too nervous at the time she first identified Thompson and in the same condition now, he declared, for her testimony to be taken as authoritative.

Proper Thing Now Is To
Peel Off Soiled Skin

Those who abhor sticky, greasy, shiny, streaked complexions should use creams and rouges sparingly during the heated days. Better to use ordinary mercurized wax instead. No amount of perspiration will produce any evidence that you've been using the wax. As it is applied at bedtime and washed off in the morning, the complexion never looks like a make-up. Mercurized wax gradually peels off a bad complexion, instead of adding anything to make it worse. It accomplishes much more than cosmetics in keeping the complexion beautifully white, satiny and youthful, free from freckles, pimples, blotches and other blemishes. Just get an ounce of it at your drug-gist's and see what a few days' treatment will do. Use like cold cream.

Goes Under Knife
Mrs. Louise Reigel, Stockdale, submitted to an operation yesterday in Mercy hospital. She is getting along nicely.

Council Passes Legislation To Reorganize Engineering Department; Provides For More Firemen, Patrolmen

The initial step towards reorganizing the city engineering department was taken by Council at an adjourned session Wednesday night when legislation was passed by unanimous vote of the eight members present.

Articles of legislation were also approved providing for two additional patrolmen and four additional firemen and increasing the pay of special policeman from $8.50 to $11.50 a day.

President Albert Weghorst presided over the meeting and the only absentee was Miss Emma Cramer, who was reported absent from the city.

The legislation reorganizing the engineering department was passed as an emergency measure and in addition to creating various positions in the department fixes the salaries on a per diem basis as follows: Engineer, $12.75; assistant engineer, $8.00; assessment clerk, $5.00; draftsman, $7.00; stenographer, $3.00; first rodman, $4.50, and second rodman, $4.00.

This reorganization, providing for the creation of several new jobs, means an outlay of approximately $18,000 a year, one city official explained, as contrasted with the cost of the engineering department prior to the resignation of George S. Wilhelm, forced by Mayor Gableman, which ran about $10,000.

More Jobs Created.
The ordinance providing for two additional patrolmen and fixing the salary at $1,500 a year will permit,

It was pointed out, the appointment of a regular policeman for Sciotoville and one for North Moreland, while the four additional firemen will provide men for the department to be established in Sciotoville, at a salary of $1,500 a year each.

A resolution was adopted awarding to Pruden & Co., Toledo, an issue of $41,500 water works extension bonds on their bid of par, accrued interest and premium of $103.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the transfer of $1,200 from the Rent fund to the Service fund.

—More Salary Increases.
On the recommendation of Service Director Gergens legislation was ordered increasing the pay of foremen of street repair gangs and of certain other workmen in the street repair department to $3.00 and $4.00, respectively. He told council that he expected to put on several gangs on street repair work at once, but that he was unable to obtain workmen at the old wages. He explained the expense of this work was paid entirely from the funds derived from the auto license money received from the state.

The application of W. D. Brown and six other property owners of Poplar street for authority to construct a sewer in the street before it is paved was referred to the street committee. The petitioners desire to build the sewer at their own expense and it was indicated the request will be granted.

Resolutions were passed determining to proceed with the paving of Cypress and Cedar streets in the Bandurick addition, Boulevard, and the work will be done by the property owners under the supervision of the city engineer.

$100,000 Bond Issue.
Legislation was ordered authorizing a bond issue of $100,000 to pay the cost of installing water service on the various streets included in the street improvement program and $7,500 bond issue for the installation of fire hydrants and equipment.

The matter of acquiring a site for the fire station to be established at Sciotoville on the motion of Mr. Westphal was referred to the Fire Committee, Safety Director and Fire Chief.

Legislation was ordered creating the position of custodian for the West End Comfort Station at a salary of $60 a month.

The blocking of crossings by N. & W. trains, resulting in the tying up of traffic in many instances for as much as 30 minutes or more at a time besides increasing fire hazard by holding up fire equipment responding to calls, came in for quite a bit of discussion and finally the proposition was referred to a special committee composed of the chairmen of the Street, Fire and Railroad Committees and Mayor Gableman and Safety Director Straus with instructions to confer with N. & W. officials in respect to the situation in an effort to get some relief.

PETITIONS FOR TAFT AND ALBAUGH TAX BILL REFERENDUMS ARRIVE
CINCINNATI, Ohio, June 28.—Petition blanks for a referendum on the Taft and Albaugh taxation acts, which were passed by the Ohio Legislature over the veto of Governor Donahue, have arrived here, it was announced today. It is understood that arrangements are being made for circulation of the petitions among electors of Hamilton County by those opposed to the two measures on which a state-wide referendum is sought.

Has Recovered
Mrs. John Kilgallon, stenographer at the Marvin C. Clark Insurance Agency, First National Bank building, returned to her work after an absence of several days because of illness.

Has Maps Of County; Yours For The Calling
Representative Adam Frick has received a supply of Scioto county maps from the department of state, Columbus, which may be had for the asking at the Chamber of Commerce. Inter-county highways are shown on this map by heavy lines and by their official names and numbers. Different colors on the map indicate the material of which each road is made. Persons desiring maps should call at the office at once before the supply is exhausted.

Lansing Yields To Treatment

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Robert Lansing, former Secretary of State, has been seriously ill from diabetes, but is said by his physicians to have shown great improvement under the administration of insulin, the new remedy recently developed in Canada.

Unknown to any but his most intimate friends, Mr. Lansing has suffered from diabetes for several years and has confined himself to a severe anti-diabetic diet, which resulted in a state of great physical debility. Six weeks ago he entered a hospital and, under the care of Dr. Sterling Ruffin of Washington, was given the insulin treatment. He responded at once, it is said, and, after he left the hospital, continued the treatment at his residence here.

Not only has he gained greatly in flesh and in strength, but his dietary restrictions have been completely removed so that now he is permitted to eat as much as he desires of all varieties of food. When he left yesterday for his summer home at Watertown, N. Y., he was said to have appeared to be well on the road to complete recovery.

Democrat Says Harding's Statements Misleading

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Chairman Hull of the Democratic National committee in a statement last night declared that to say that certain statements made by President Harding in his address on taxation Tuesday night at Salt Lake City, "are grossly misleading is to use the mildest possible language."

"In his speech Tuesday," said Mr. Hull, "President Harding who, in the transparent disguise of a business man, is now strenuously attempting to lead the public to believe that the Harding administration during the past twelve months has wiped out a huge deficit of $222,000,000 and created in lieu a surplus of $200,000,000."

much the Harding administration is reducing the cost of government by comparison of total expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922 with those for the year 1923. "Treasury figures," the statement continued, "show total expenditures of $3,759,000,000 for 1922, and $3,730,000,000 for 1923, or a total reduction of all expenditures of only $29,000,000. It is upon this paltry reduction of $29,000,000 that Republican politicians hang all their present load and loose talk to the effect that the Harding administration during the past twelve months has wiped out a huge deficit of $222,000,000 and created in lieu a surplus of $200,000,000."

He further asserted that "We have reduced the national debt to $22,400,000,000 from its peak of $28,500,000,000 on August 31, 1919. The President modestly assumes entire credit for his administration."

As to tax reductions, Mr. Hull said that "Omitting the repeal of a few small miscellaneous taxes, the Harding administration through its internal tax revision law, has only reduced taxes in the estimated amount of $600,000,000."

Mr. Hull contended that "the fairest and most accurate test of how

Demonstration Week

Ending Saturday, June 30

Come Today; Tomorrow May Be Too Late!

So many women have taken advantage of this special Red Star midsummer event—which ends this week—that our stock of these modern oil stoves is getting low. Today you can get the exact size and style you want; tomorrow it may be in SOME OTHER woman's kitchen.

This is almost your last chance; this remarkable offer may never be made again. So we want to urge you to come to our store and see an actual demonstration of how the famous Red Star Stove will bring real comfort to you these hot summer days—and next winter, too.

Thousands of women have improved their cooking with Red Star Stoves. The patented burners turn kerosene or gasoline into gas. You light it just like a gas stove, and you cook just as fast and easy as you can with a gas stove. Think of having no wicks to clean or replace! Hot, clean, odorless gas heat—and a saving of one-quarter of your fuel bill!

But to have one of these handsome oil stoves in your kitchen for such a ridiculously small outlay, you must seize the opportunity at once, FOR THE OFFER IS FOR THIS WEEK ONLY.

LANCASTER GRAY AUTO TUBE

The Inner Tube—Your First Line of Defense Against Tire Depreciation

GOOD tires deserve the support of the best tubes you can buy. Choose both carefully. Remember—it is poor economy to put a cheap tube in a good tire.

Some tubes are "brittle" and lifeless. Others are porous—short-lived. Lancaster Tubes are fit "running mates" for Lancaster Tires. They are thick, heavy—extra good rubber cured perfectly. And every tube is factory tested—either proved perfect or sent to the scrap pile.

We're as proud of Lancaster Tubes as we are of Lancaster Cord and Fabric Tires. The next time you buy a tube or tire, choose Lancaster—and get better, longer service.

Greenup May Get Big Hotel

GREENUP, Ky., June 28.—Wm. Elmer and C. B. Johnson, both well known hotel men of Cincinnati, are here to look for a location for a first class hotel.

Mr. Elmer for years has been owner and manager of Elmer Hotel and the Famous Gold Dragon, Sixth and Walnut streets, Cincinnati, and also owns the Gold Dragon at Latonia Race Track. With the new race track opening at an early date, five miles from here, this is a much needed improvement.

They were much impressed by the site at Front and Harrison streets, as it is an ideal one for a hotel. This lot until a few years ago was owned by the Winn estate and for years, a hotel known as the Kouns House was operated by Misses Kate and Sallie Winn. Only a short time ago, a division was made, the Kouns House was remodeled and this lot and an old building were bought by Clarence Callahan.

Should the Cincinnati men be fortunate enough to secure this lot a 75-room, modern hotel will be built and will have a swimming pool 50x100 feet. E. E. Fullerton and W. T. Cole, attorneys, will look after the interests of this deal.

Market News

New York Stocks

NEW YORK, June 28.—Short covering in some spots and gains in other places took place in today's opening of the market but heaviness continued in a number of stocks sold on weakened marginal accounts. Downward which dropped 9 1/2 points yesterday, snapped back 3 points and Huntington Typewriter, New York Central and Union Pacific each opened a point or more higher. United States Steel, Baldwin, Studer and American Can improved fractionally on initial sales.

The market presented a spotty appearance during the early trading with a score of new low records for the year being established during the first half hour, including Kelly-Springfield, producers and Refiners, Famous Players, American Can and Maxwell Motors A. and B. Most of the rails advanced but Lackawanna dropped 1 1/2 and Norfolk and Western 1 1/2. Chandler and Mack Truck each dropped about 1 1/2. American Woolen advanced 2 1/2. Foreign exchanges opened slightly lower.

Substantial buying orders among the dividend paying rails and a wide assortment of specialties including certain oils, equipments, motors and merchandising shares, which advanced 1 to 3 points, failed to stem the stream of liquidation and selling in other parts of the list. This selling was most effective in the metals, Bethlehem, Crucible, and Gulf States dropping to new low levels for the year. Liquidation of these shares eventually caused practically the entire list to turn downward. Call money opened at six per cent.

Selling for both accounts ceased abruptly in the latter part of today's stock market after an early period of nervousness in which approximately 800 shares touched as low prices for the year. Gains of two to five points were quite common at the close. The closing was strong.

Chicago Grain And Provisions

CHICAGO, June 28.—Aggressive buying together was scantiness of country offerings gave a decided lift to the price of wheat today during the early dealings. The buying was based chiefly on estimates that in the last two days as much as 4,000,000 bushels in future deliveries had been taken for seaboard accounts. The fact that Liverpool quotations virtually failed outright to reflect yesterday's sharp setback here, formed an additional bullish influence. Opening prices which ranged from 1/2 to 1 1/2 higher with Sept. 1.02 1/2 to 1.03 1/2 and Dec. 1.05 to 1.06 1/2, were followed by some further gains.

Notwithstanding wheat strength, demand for corn was lacking, bears contending that corn prices were too high. After opening at 1/4 decline to a like advance, Sept. 7 1/2 to 7 3/4 the market underwent a material setback, all around.

The close was unsettled 1/4 to 1 1/2 net higher with Sept. 1.02 1/2 to 1.03 and Dec. 1.05 1/2 to 1.06 1/2.

Oats were affected more by the action of wheat than of corn. Oats started unchanged to 1/4 higher, Sept. 37 1/2 and later held near to the initial range.

Provisions were easier with hogs and corn.

The close was unsettled at 1/4 to 1/2 net decline, Sept. 7 1/2 to 7 3/4.

WAS SUCCESSOR OF LATIN

Why French Has Been Known for Centuries as the "Language of Diplomacy"

French is called "the language of diplomacy" because for about 300 years the custom has been for diplomats belonging to different countries to use this language as an international medium of speech. The reason for this usage is not only that French is very clear and expressive—having many "nuances" or shades of meaning—but it is the "polite" language (the language of courts and courtiers), and in a way, perhaps, the logical successor of Latin—once employed as a medium for conversation by any educated men who belonged to different countries.

In the Twelfth and Thirteenth centuries, French was used extensively throughout Europe. In England it rivaled the native tongue for two centuries after the Norman conquest of 1066. In Germany princes and barons engaged French-born tutors for their children, while the long reign of Louis XIV of France (the "Grand Monarque"), in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries, indirectly contributed towards making French an international language. The recent tendency has been to confine this use of French to oral intercourse—written instructions and other diplomatic dispatches being usually couched in the language of the persons employing and transmitting them.

CARRY REALISM TOO FAR

Over-Ambitious Stage Managers Are Apt to Forget That in Their Efforts to Impress.

"It takes no extraordinary mind," writes a stage manager, "to see that a pictorial artist would be dissatisfied with realism as a means of expression, but there are none who have expressed half so clearly as Arthur Hopkins the stage manager in which realistic settings defeat their own purpose, which is the illusion of actuality."

"If a particular restaurant in all its details is offered," says Mr. Hopkins, "it remains for the audience to recall its mental photograph of that restaurant and check it up with what is shown on the stage. The result of the whole mental comparing process is to impress upon the auditor that he is in a theater witnessing a very accurate reproduction, only remarkable because it is not real. So the upshot of the realistic effort is further to emphasize the unreality of the whole attempt, setting, play and all."

Death in a Fox Fur

A singular case of death caused by a fox fur is recorded from Bourges. In this case the head of the animal had been set up in a lifelike pose, its jaws, still set with teeth, serving as a fastener. The owner of the fur was joking with a girl friend about the fur and with the jaws slightly scratched her friend's nose. The incident was forgotten until two days later, when the girl's nose began to swell, and she found that she must have been pricked by one of the animal's teeth. An operation was carried out, but this intervention proved too late and the girl died within a few hours. The danger of the wound which caused the girl's death lay to a great extent in its apparent insignificance, for it was so slight that it did not even bleed or cause any inconvenience until it was too late to apply antiseptic measures effectively. Paris Correspondence, London Telegraph.

Fishy Golf Tale

Freak golf shots are heard of off and on all the time, the latest having to do with a fish—a somewhat suspicious connection, to be sure. J. W. Williams, in an attempt to see how far a golf ball could be hit, drove from a cliff on Lake Erie. As the ball was about to descend into the water, so the tale proceeds—a little fish leaped above the surface and caught it in its mouth. Within the next hour the golfer, walking on the beach in that vicinity, found a six-foot sturgeon well inscribed with a golf ball. With his club he struck the fish and then pulled it ashore. When the fish was prepared for consumption the golf ball was found wedged in its gullet—so that the club to which Williams belongs had smoked sturgeon for a week.

Attractive National Park

Mount Rainier National park, with an area of 233 square miles, in western central Washington, was created in 1899. Its distinctive characteristics are the largest accessible single-peak system in the world, 28 glaciers, some of which are enormous in size; 48 square miles of glacier, 50 to 1,000 feet thick, and remarkable subalpine high-tower fields. Mount Rainier itself towers 14,408 feet above tide water in Puget sound. Excellent roads and trails, giant rivers of ice, snow-covered peaks, numerous waterfalls, giant fir and cedar trees and deep lakes of all colors of the rainbow are a few of the side attractions.

government to rebut the claim that the things charged were "the natural result, in a great measure, of the acts of the government officials."

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 28.—(By the Associated Press.)—Indictments against 226 coal operators, officials of the United Mine Workers and mining companies returned February 27, 1921, charging conspiracy to violate the Sherman anti-trust act were dismissed in United States district court today by Judge A. B. Anderson upon motion of Attorney General Daugherty.

After the attorney general had read a lengthy statement in which he reviewed the case and declared his belief that "a verdict of not guilty would be the inevitable result of the trial of this case," Judge Anderson without any comment turned to the clerk of the court and ordered that the case be nolle prossed.

ministration, Mr. Adams highly commended its financial achievements. He said the administration has kept its promise to the people to place the government on a business basis.

This is the second number of regional conferences to be held throughout the country since the one having been held at Boston recently. It was stated that the sole purpose of the convention was to see that the political machinery in each state is in perfect condition so that it can be set in motion immediately after the Republican presidential nominee will have been selected. The condition of the party organization in the various states was to be ascertained with a view to enlarging or otherwise strengthening it where it may be deemed necessary. In some cases, it was said, additional party bureaus or departments may be established to look after such matters as the vote of foreigners or other matters regarded as essential to party success at the polls.

"KICK RIEGEL OUT," SHOUT VETS

COLUMBUS, O., June 28.—(By the United Press.)—The alleged designation of Robert E. Lee by the state department of public instruction as the greatest civil war general caused an uproar at the state encampment of the G. A. R. here today. The excitement temporarily overshadowed the session of officers.

A resolution was introduced condemning the state educational department for "this historical untruth" and urging that Vernon Riegel, state superintendent, be retired from office because of it. The resolution was based on a question in the state teachers' examination written by Riegel which asked "What qualities of leadership did Lee display which made him the greatest of civil war generals?"

The resolution was tabled pending investigation.

Following reading of the resolution scores of gray haired veterans leaped to their feet and shouted their indignation. Shouts of "Kick Riegel out of office" filled the air. This is unfair to Grant, Sherman, Jackson and other union generals, exclaimed David S. Pugh, of Columbus.

Complaints Filed Against Chiropractors

Prosecution of local chiropractors for alleged violation of the limited practitioners' act was renewed Thursday when Drs. P. D. Parks, D. D. Owen, O. L. Knechtly and Hazel Knechtly were required to appear in Municipal court to answer complaints against them by Frank A. Dorsey, of the state medical board.

The complaints, which were filed early today, contain similar charges under which the defendants were convicted and fined in Municipal court a few weeks ago, but as a protest against their prosecution under what they branded as an unfair and unjust law, the chiropractors went to jail rather than pay the fine.

The defendants were not required to enter a plea when they appeared in court today and their formal arraignment on the charges was deferred until one o'clock next Tuesday in order to give their counsel, Attorneys A. H. Bannan and Judge Blair an opportunity to file a plea in bar or any other pleading which they may desire.

D. S. WILDER, OF COLUMBUS, HEADS THE G. A. R.; WARREN GETS NEXT ENCAMPMENT

COLUMBUS, O., June 28.—(By the Associated Press.)—Warren has been selected as the place of holding the next annual encampment of the Ohio Grand Army of the Republic, it was announced today at business meetings of the Ohio Encampment in session here.

Miss James E. Bailey, of Wapakoneta, was unanimously chosen president of the Woman's Relief Corps.

Friends of G. M. Seligman, of Van Wert, present Ohio department commander today, started a boom for his selection as national commander in chief of the Grand Army at the national encampment which will be held in Milwaukee in September.

Daniel S. Wilder, of Columbus, was elected commander of the Grand Army of the Republic in Ohio today, winning over Edmund Buerisall, of Batavia.

L. H. Derby, of Norwalk, was chosen senior vice commander; J. L. Romble, New Philadelphia, junior vice commander; Rev. H. B. Westervelt, Columbus, chaplain, and Dr. D. H. Welling, Worthington, department medical director.

Additional officers elected by the Woman's Relief Corps were: Daisy Reynolds, Columbus, senior vice president; Lula B. Stone, Delaware, junior vice president; Nettie B. Seifert, Wapakoneta, secretary; Mary E. Bell, Cambridge, chaplain; Brunella Miesse, Lancaster, counselor; Frances Van Horn, Lima; Ida Ream, Columbus; Mary Houritt, Akron; Lillian Chambers, Sidney; and Amelia Predergast, Cincinnati, members of the executive board.

Resolutions recommending increases in maximum pensions from $70 to $75 a month and reverence for law in schools and universities, were passed at the business session.

A resolution proposing that the encampment go on record denouncing the state director of education for inserting in an elementary teachers' examination, "what qualities of leadership did General Robert E. Lee display which made him the greatest of civil war generals?" was tabled. The resolution excited lively discussion among the veterans.

The parade was abandoned on account of rain.

Refused To Give Lease

Dr. S. D. Ruggles denied a rumor Thursday that he had leased his property at Sixth and Gay streets to an oil company to be used as a new filling station. He stated a firm was after it but wanted a ten year lease and he refused to give it. He is having his property remodeled and will rent it when repairs are completed.

Case Continued

A row over chickens running on a neighbor's garden explained the appearance of Clarence Clark in Municipal court yesterday to answer to a disorderly conduct complaint made by Harley Hamer, but after hearing both sides the court continued the case for further developments and ordered the parties to go home and keep the peace by avoiding further disagreements.

The two families live neighbors near Sciotoville and ill feeling has existed between them for some time as the result of an altercation which brought them into court at the time.

BOAT RACING IS MODERN

It Once Was Considered Form of Manual Labor, and Appropriate Only for Slaves.

Boat racing, except among professionals, is quite a modern sport, which dates, roughly, from the commencement of the last century. It was first brought into fashion about that time by the two great Thames-side public schools, Eton and Westminster, from which young oarsmen took their favorite pastime with them to Oxford and Cambridge. Previously "tugging at the tollsome oar" had been considered a form of manual labor fit only for slaves or the poorest class of citizens. It was also the kind of punishment reserved for the worst class of criminals, the Detroit News remarks.

The first amateur boat race of which there is authentic record was a match between the barristers of the Temple and the Boys of Westminster school, which the school-boys won because the men of law were fat. But boat racing did not really obtain a recognized place in amateur sport until the '30s of the last century, when Henley regatta was established and the Wingfield sculls were founded.

AND WAR WAS ON AGAIN

Facetious Minneapolis Man Did His Part in Giving New Life to the Old Animosity.

In an attempt to settle the war of rivalry that has so long existed between the cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul, it was decided by the civic organizations of the two cities to have a banquet and get-together meeting to see if ways and means could not be found to bury all animosities.

After partaking of good food and pre-Volsstead refreshments, speeches were in order. The chairman called on a prominent citizen of Minneapolis, who, in a very forcible manner, eulogized the Twin Cities, their resources, their advantages and the pleasure of living in the united city.

When he had finished a gentleman from St. Paul arose and stated that there was just one question he wanted to ask: "What shall we name the united city?"

The gentleman from Minneapolis arose and, after considerable thinking, said: "I would name it 'Minneapolis' for Minneapolis, and 'Ha! Ha!' for St. Paul."—Forbes Magazine.

Sincere, but Mistaken.

A neatly dressed man, with a black mustache, stood, during the fall months, just outside our station, and as passengers came out would stop, then and inquire: "Have you any old clothing you'd like to sell?"

My husband recently bought a new overcoat, and I decided to sell his old one. I remembered the man with the black mustache. I watched for him for some time without success. Finally, one evening, I saw him in his usual place. I walked up to him, and said: "Are you the old clothes man?"

"Am I what?" he asked.

"Don't you buy old clothes?" I inquired again.

"I do not," said he, frankly amazed.

I mumbled apologies and departed hastily.—Detroit Free Press.

Science Explains Top Spinning.

Everyone who has ever whirled a string to which a stone is tied must have noticed the strong "pull" as the stone tried to get away. Every part of a spinning top is trying to fly away from the center of the top in exactly the same way. This pull is called "centrifugal force"—the tendency to fly from the center. As each particle of the top has an equal pull, none of them can upset the balance of the others. So long as this force is strong enough—that is, so long as the spin lasts—it counteracts the ordinary power of gravity, which has to confine itself to the peg of the top, the only point actually touching the earth. When the top slows down, the centrifugal force relaxes, gravity comes into its own again—and the top falls over.—Scientific American.

Borderland of Sleep.

"Once you cross the threshold of sleep," said Dr. Hereward T. Carrington, lecturer, psychologist and student of the occult, "you begin to dream. Often you do not remember dreaming, and rarely ever do you remember more than the sketchy outlines of your dreams, but the dreaming has been continuous just the same."

It is with this threshold, this borderland state, when the conscious is becoming quiet and the subconscious is becoming active, that the study of the nature of sleep chiefly is concerned. It is in that period that most of the important discoveries about sleep and dreams are made. A few instances have been found where the figures of dreams, dream impressions, have been so vivid as to remain with the dreamer for a short time after waking.

Morning!

One Feature Worth Entire Cost of Paper

That seems a strong statement to make, but we confidently believe that the great majority of the subscribers to the Portsmouth Morning Sun will agree that the DR. COPELAND ARTICLES are worth even more than the cost of the Sun per week. Dr. Copeland is one of the leading medical authorities of the country. He writes, every day for the Morning Sun, dealing with some topic of vital interest to the health of everyone. His articles afford a liberal education in health and hygiene. Try the Sun and see if this is not true.

This is but one of the many features in the Morning Sun. For instance some of the best cartoons are to be found every morning in the Sun. Probably the "best line of slang" in the country is used in "Our Boarding House." The Sun is growing. Why not help it along?

James Franck Painfully Hurt When The Side Car Of Motorcycle Turns Over

A severe gash at the back of the head, a badly cut nose, and a sprained ankle were sustained by James Franck, well known resident of the West Side, occupant of the side car of a motorcycle driven by John Bonner, living on Front above Bond when the machine overturned at the intersection of Front and Gay streets about 5:30 yesterday evening. Bonner escaped with a few minor bruises.

The motorcycle overturned when Bonner endeavored to escape a collision with three automobiles. He had been driving east on Front street, an auto was directly behind him and one was approaching him. When he neared the intersection he barely escaped being struck by a car coming south on Gay street. Fearing a collision, he made a sharp turn, and the motorcycle and side car overturned. Franck was pinned beneath the motorcycle but was not injured badly.

The motorcycle was not damaged except for a broken headlight.

19 Kiddies Enjoying Real Life At Fresh Air Camp

Would you like to go some place where you would live over again the days of your childhood? Where you could watch real American boys and girls enjoy God's great outdoors; watch them play on the hillsides and camp over the woodlands and build "hamlet camps" and "Indian forts" in the "Wild, Rocky mountains"? If you would, crank up your fiver and drive out Mabert Road to Seventeenth street, turn out Seventeenth street and drive up over the hill, and there, on the very crest of the highest point, you will find the Bureau of Community Service fresh air camp.

These youngsters, selected from homes where all of the conveniences of modern housekeeping are not enjoyed, enjoy two weeks of honest-to-goodness outdoor life, with the best of wholesome food and the best of care. They sleep in screened porches, where the full sweep of the pure air can fill their youthful lungs, and with the vigor of living. They are out early in the morning romping and playing as only real 100 per cent American boys and girls can enjoy playing. And they climb in bed at 8:30, every night, worn out with play, and enjoy a long night of sleep, the deep untroubled sleep of childhood. It will do your heart good to see these kiddies enjoying themselves.

STEEL INDUSTRY SHOWS NO SIGNS OF SLOWING UP; MANY ORDERS PLACED

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 28.—Six months of remarkable production and growing activity in the steel industry entering the second half of the year with practically undiminished prospects. Most of the more important producers have order books so large as to insure the continuance of present conditions until well into the fourth quarter; some, notably at Chicago, are virtually filled to the year's close. Furthermore, new tonnage is showing a tendency to expand and is expected to develop increasing volume. The outstanding fact is that consumption has taken up the greatest half-year tonnage of iron and steel, by a considerable margin, ever produced in this country and no signs are yet appearing of a consequential slackening of the total demand, except where normal seasonal influences have had their effect.

The Pennsylvania has placed 15,000 tons and the Reading 10,000 tons of rails. The Illinois Central is inquiring for 80,000 tons and the Erie for 60,000 tons. The New York Central is seeking 7,000 to 8,000 tons of steel for shop needs, the Big Four 1,500 to 2,000 tons for similar purposes and the Pennsylvania has just bought 5,000 tons more.

The 24,000 tons of steel for the Hetch Hetchy aqueduct will be finished by the Steel Corporation and the Bethlehem Steel Co. Iron Trade Review composite of fourteen iron and steel products continues to be put down by the falling pig iron market. This week it is $46.16. Last week it was $46.34. The composite now has declined for seven consecutive weeks.

Steel prices are steady and show no tendency to dip below the Steel Corporation or minimum schedule except in black sheets. The recent purchases of 25,000 tons of sheet bars by the Steel Corporation were above $42.50 but this buyer has been quoted such a price since.

Maneuvering of pig iron producers and consumers for market advantage continues. The volume of inquiry and buying is better though not liberal. Prices still softer.

Dumping by the French in neutral markets of large quantities of coal tar products accumulated from German operations in the Ruhr has reacted unfavorably upon conditions in this country. This interference with export demand, in conjunction with the heavy operations of by-product coke works has caused a backing up of supplies of benzol, naphthalene and sulphate of ammonia in the hands of producers and the spot market has weakened sharply.

YOUNG OF LOWER ANIMALS

Seem to the Observer to Be Strange Little Objects—Baby Giraffe Not Long Helpless.

Recently one of the tortoises at a large city zoo laid 42 eggs and hatched out the first tortoise to be born in the "zoo." At birth he was two inches long and weighed a little over an ounce. His mother was fifty years old when he was hatched out.

Young animals are always very strange little things when first seen. The porcupine is born with its spines, but they are quite soft and pliable. They soon harden when exposed to the air. The pupa is born spotted, and has rings on its tail. At six months old his coat becomes gray, in color and his tail loses all its rings.

The tapir is born with curious markings of spots and streaks on his coat. But when he is four months old these all disappear.

Some of the young animals have a pretty good time. The woolly opossum of South America gives his youngster any amount of joy rides, and she will climb trees quite nimbly with as many as 12 of her children clinging tenaciously to her. The young black-necked swan from the same country often gets a ride in his mother's mouth.

The giraffe is one of the nimblest animals, even when young. He is disdaining any carrying on his mother's part, and when he is only three days old will trot gaily along by his mother's side.

BEARDS ONCE WERE PRIZED

To Be Without One Was Considered Sign of Effeminacy in Civilization's Early Stages.

Back in the early stages of civilization the clean-shaven man of today, instead of giving the impression of power and strength, would have been looked upon as a very effeminate person, an outcast in worth-while society.

All nations in their early development cherished the beard as something almost sacred, a sign of strength and manhood. The beard through an accident or as punishment was as degrading a thing as could befall a man. Tradition has connected wisdom with a long beard; artists have embodied it in their pictures. Most of the Biblical characters, even the first person of the Trinity, is given a beard by old painters and carvers.

The oath of the beard is as old as history. It is found in the first English political ballad when Sir Simon De Montfort swears "by the hair on his chin."

Large Supply Needed.

Eph Brown was a true believer and fond of any religious ceremony. When "de suction" caught him, he became a sort of unofficial chaplain in a colored labor battalion. He worked assiduously among his fellows, and finally persuaded a dozen or so to join him in an open-air baptizing on a day in January.

That it was necessary to chop a hole in the river ice to provide a space for immersion rather cooled the ardor of the converts, but not Eph's. Seizing the nearest soldier, he plunged him beneath the icy water. He had not reckoned the swift current, however, and the luckless victim was snatched out of his hands and carried permanently out of sight.

Eph was not in the least disconcerted. "De Lawd giveth," he intoned, "an' de Lawd taketh away. Bring me anothah privit."—American Legion Weekly.

Plant a Tree.

Every year we cut in the United States wood enough to measure 20,000,000,000 cubic feet of lumber. Each year we cut over 10,000,000 acres of land. At that rate the last of our merchantable lumber will have been exhausted in between 80 and 40 years. Even now we are approaching the forest bankruptcy. We all know the disasters that follow in the path of such a state of affairs. Trees do not mature in a day. The fact that a timber crop is so long in getting here discourages many from doing their share in the work of reforestation. If the land owner will look but a short distance ahead, he will learn that in planting trees he can turn much waste land into a source of profit and at the same time he will be performing a duty to this country and the human race.—Exchange.

First American-Made Steel.

The first steel produced in the United States, according to the geological survey, Department of the Interior, was probably made in Connecticut in 1728, by Samuel Hixley and Joseph Dewey. Crucible steel was first successfully produced in the United States in 1832 on the works of William and John H. Garrard at Cincinnati. Bessemer steel was first made in this country in September, 1864, by William F. Durfee, at an experimental plant at Wyandotte, Mich., and open-hearth steel in 1864 by the New Jersey Steel and Iron company, at Trenton.

Grizzel Awarded $5,000 Damages; $1,000 "Smart" Money By Jury

A Common Pleas court jury Thursday awarded Harry E. Grizzel, a North Moreland steel worker, $5,000 damages in addition to $1,000 "smart" money in his suit against William Earl Basham, prominent Lakeside, New Boston man, for alienation of the affections of his wife, Sarah Grizzel.

The trial which started Wednesday morning was concluded shortly after court reconvened after the noon recess and the case went to the jury following Judge Thomas' general charge. After deliberating a little more than an hour on the case the jury turned its verdict into court. Ord Thompson, McDermott merchant was foreman of the jury and the entire panel concurred in the verdict. Grizzel sued for $25,000 damages, alleging that Basham not only alienated the affections of his wife, Sarah Grizzel, but that as a result of his associations with the wife persuaded her to abandon him, breaking up his home and destroyed his happiness.

The evidence adduced in the trial was a bit spicy and a number of love letters which Basham admitted writing to Mrs. Grizzel while she was in California, figured prominently in the case.

Mrs. Grizzel, the central figure in the case, was present in court, but was not called to the witness stand by either side. Basham's wife was also an interested spectator at the trial.

Attorneys B. F. Kimble and E. G. Miller represented Grizzel, and Attorneys Miller and Searl appeared for Basham.

Teachers Close Convention

CEDAR POINT, O., June 28.—(By the Associated Press.)—The annual convention of the Ohio State Teachers' Association, the sessions of which were devoted in a large part to the initiation of a campaign for a revision of the state's taxation system, closed here today with Professor George D. Strayer, of the Columbia University Teachers' College, advocating that distinct changes be made in the methods of obtaining revenue. "The ownership of real estate is not an adequate measure of the ability to pay taxes," Professor Strayer declared in expressing his belief that every person having taxable ability should pay some sort of a direct personal tax.

"We are spending more money for public education now than ever before in our history," said Professor Strayer. "We are not, however, supporting education more generously than in the past."

The increased amount of money expenditure, he said, is set off by the decreased purchasing power of the dollar, and the embarkation into new channels of education. In 1920, he said, the country spent only one and one half per cent of its annual income for education, the speaker declared, and education must be looked to as "the only possibility of stabilizing our security and of perpetuating our government. Education is an investment which promises large dividends," he said.

The Hanging Gardens of the Marquesas

As Told By Captain Edward A. Salisbury to M. Wilkinson Mount
Copyright, 1922, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

DROPPING anchor in the Bay of Hiva Oa was like sinking a plummet in some purple-blue jewel of marvelous color and brilliancy, gleaming against towering battlements of green jade. The canoes that dashed out from the village to meet my ship, the Wisdom II, seemed the only live things in a panorama of dim river-cleft valleys and great peaks covered with tropical vegetation. We were in the heart of the Marquesas Islands, famed among the most exquisite in the South Pacific ocean and as owning the most beautiful native women in the vast expanse of waters.

If the islands formed a picture, the natives proved a picture-gallery. From head to foot visitors who came aboard were adorned with barbaric designs. Never have I seen tattooing carried to such a marvelous degree of perfection. There is no flamboyant splash of a "tattooist's" brush. Their etching is a painful process and the acute nervousness of a young man or woman while undergoing the operation does not deter the artist. Kind friends sit on the arms and legs of the quivering victim while the tattooer carefully develops intricate patterns over his tortured skin.

Our guests did not confine their exhibition of native art to their persons, however. The men wore around their hips a pareu of calico ornamented with large geometrical and floral designs in yellow and white.

"How many people have you?" I asked a chief who had come to welcome us.

His face saddened. He waved his hand towards the far peaks of the islands and shook his head.

"My people are but few," he said. "Before the great canoe came there were many tribes. Many people feasted in the valleys. The great canoe came and they began to die. They died like fish when the streams are dry."

The Phantom Canoe
"White traders brought disease," explained a Marquesan planter. "A tradition has been handed down for generations that the appearance of a phantom canoe landing at the Marquesas signifies an impending calamity. The magnitude of the misfortune is measured by the size of the phantom craft which has never failed to bring its dread warning to these islands."

"The moon was bright on the water," interposed the chief. "My grandfather was in the bay fishing, with his wife, his son and daughters, when he heard the swish of many paddles approaching. He looked and saw the biggest canoe he had ever beheld. It was a hundred men canoe. It swept by them into the harbor. He saw it rest there—a great giant canoe—in the moonlight. Even as they gazed it vanished."

The narrator trembled with excitement. "My grandfather called his people together in the morning and told them that the greatest disaster they had ever known was about to visit them. His warriors prepared for defense in case of attack; the women made ready to store food lest the rains should fall and their coconuts and bread-fruit cease to bear and they die of famine."

"In two days," the planter took up the story, "white men landed on the island. That was seventy years ago and out of eighty thousand natives there are now a bare twenty-five hundred left—and most of those are dying of consumption. Father Oliver declares that in five years not one will be left."

Missionaries put clothes on South Sea Islanders and this kills them. And white traders brought diseases worse than clothes to decimate the race. Strangely enough, white people are not affected by the peculiar diseases that afflict these islands.

On shore I found missionaries who seemed to think the pareu a logical garment for Marquesans, and who sought to teach them the ways of Heaven rather than the fashions of earth, and is was a pareu-clad assemblage who entertained me at a sumptuous repast of roast pig, roasted green doves, delicious taro leaves cooked in grated coconut milk, baked taro root (like yams), bread-fruit, fresh-water crawfish and many varieties of crustaceans, and salt water fish, prepared in a style our best chefs might envy, and accompanied by coconut milk, squeezed from grated kernels of nuts.

We were taken to see magnificent plantations of coconut and fruit trees. Beyond and above the plummy expanse of coconut plantations rose great jagged green peaks that lured me to explore.

They were flecked with color of blossom and bird, wild goats bleated from jutting crags; wild cows lowed to their young, deep luxuriant vegetation; parrot-green pigeons invited a flying Marquesan arrow; there was no sign of beasts of prey, only the mountains were formidable. Native trails that led to fastnesses where mountain bananas grew, and the green doves hewed, appeared impassable.

A Baffling Peak
I have penetrated many a difficult jungle but the peaks of Hiva Oa baffled me. Our native escort, however, proved experts at mountain climbing. Marquesans are as sure-footed as the Llamas of Peru. While we sought some sort of footings, natives sprang ahead and presently we saw them traversing the ledges where a mountain goat could not have gone.

"They hold their lives cheaply!" I exclaimed. My guide smiled. "That is nothing," he declared.

signs on the dry finished fabric.

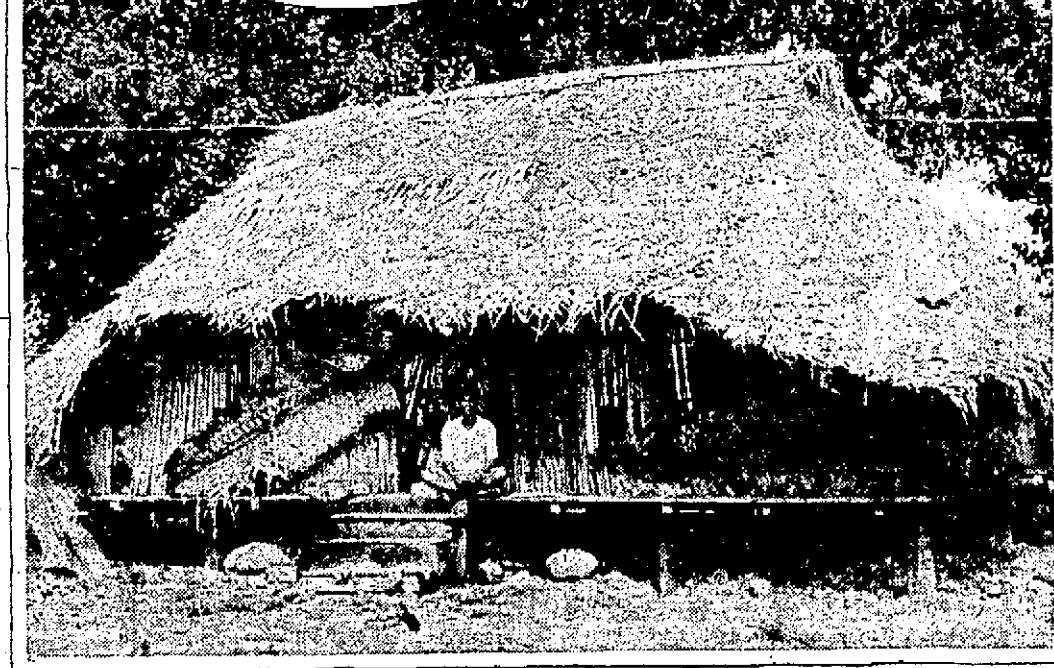

Marquesans have few wants and supply those outside the island by trading, principally copra, which is sought by the Society Islands, six hundred miles away.

To these far places the Marquesans were wont to sail in their primitive canoes. These are formed by hollowing out a log by means of fire and shaping it with an adz. They hoist a sail and go on long journeys of trade and adventure in these small craft. Now the Marquesan often makes his long journeys in an American whaleboat, he employs modern tools in his boat-making, and uses oars instead of paddles in these modern crafts. Like the Paumotuans, insecurely perched on their coral atolls, the Marquesans are experts at going through the surf, and both men and women disport themselves like fish in the water.

It is difficult for white people to comprehend the unthinking generosity of the Marquesan islanders.

Sometimes a house needs patching in the Marquesas.

they leaped gracefully in the water, feet first, disported themselves like fish in its translucent depths, slipped off their one garment—the pareu while underneath the waves, and washed it in the fresh water stream into which they always go after a salt dip. In this fresh water they rinse themselves, their masses of long black hair, and their pareu. This strip of calico dries in the sun in about a minute when the woman comes out modestly clad before the public.

Out of the water they trimmed and spread themselves, like bright-plumaged birds, upon the sands to dry. Their pareus, decorated with yellow flowers and foliage on a red-dyed background, made them look like a flock of roosting flamingoes.

"What is that for?" I asked one of my new acquaintances, indicating a scarlet hibiscus worn over the right ear of a young girl.

"She wants to be married," came the information. "If she wears the flower over her left ear she is not looking for a mate. The same thing applies to a young man, and this signal of courtship simplifies matters for everybody. A swain doesn't waste his time courting the wrong girl and a maiden does not primp up for an indifferent man."

The status of women has changed little in spite of thirty years of Christian teachings. The Marquesan has accepted Christianity, but he weaves its precepts into his own understanding of what is right, and no one respects him the less because of his ideas. He believes that it is right that women should be the property of man, and he lives up to this belief. And so far as I could see, there was no opposition to the old order of things on the part of women, who are much petted by men and exercise entire freedom in sex relations.

How the Marquesans Dance

The impulse to dance seems to have been born in South Sea Island races and I found their dances as different as their appearance from one another. In some localities men and women do not dance together, but the Hula-Hula of the Marquesas is a sex dance in which both men and women take part.

Beneath the trees we watched the lines of dancers sway this way and that; now forward and back-

Unfortunately many natives have learned also to like rum and opium, which unscrupulous traders introduced among them, and in order to obtain these articles an habitué will sell anything he possesses.

Like Bright-Plumaged Birds

I found the Marquesans of a distinctly Caucasian order, sun-burned. They are of the Polynesian type, neither yellow nor negroid, and every day I saw a man or woman who reminded me of someone at home.

Through the assistance of white residents on the island, of which there were about a dozen, with some twenty half-breeds, it became quite easy to get the belles of the Marquesas to consent to have their pictures taken. My cameramen, at their moving picture cameras, waited for them to take their almost hourly dip in the sea, when wheeled as one. No military troop ever executed manœuvres with greater precision and to this union of motion was added the grace of untrammelled limbs.

Rows of men and women faced seats, with slabs for backs, against and danced towards each other; which the cannibals could lean in hesitated, and danced back, always comfort.

Reminders of Cannibalism

The nearest thing to cannibalism that I witnessed in the Marquesas and in which I shared with enjoyment, was the eating of raw fish. Many of the natives place this fish in lime juice, which whitens it, and the resulting tidbit is delicious.

When we became better acquainted some of the older residents described the "long-pig" banquets which flourished sixty years ago and the last of which occurred in Hiva Oa some thirty years past, and they led me to their whilom feast grounds.

Reminders of cannibalism are everywhere present. Near all the villages were old sacrificial stones, pits for oven fires, slabs on which the victim had been killed; and themselves around this primitive native songs.

The Death Feast

Of all feasts observed by the Marquesans the death-feast is by far the most prominent and remarkable of any I have seen. It is arranged by the man in whose honor it will be held at some day set by him, and when he is, and seems to be, in perfect health. A native makes up his mind that he will die on—say, Friday. He does not believe that he will go to Heaven unless a suitable death-feast is provided, and he believes in personal supervision of an affair of such importance to his future. So he sends out word to friends that they are appointed to kill cattle and goats for the occasion; women are dispatched to catch fish; boys, to spear fish under water; others are set to work gathering food of every sort and, having set in motion everything essential for a great banquet, he then superintends the digging of his grave.

Seldom does a man act as host at his own funeral feast. He invariably dies in the morning of the appointed day and his plans are carried out to the last detail. If, by some miscarriage of fate, the man does not die until a day or two after the time he designates, his wishes are carried out anyway. The feast is held, he presides over it, the funeral takes place, and everything he owns is distributed with equity. To all intents and purposes he is dead and entitled to his place in the little graveyard on the hillside. At least ninety per cent of the men who decide that they are going to die on a fixed date do die on time and with no apparent reason for doing so.

All the tropical fruits grow in the Marquesas in more varieties and more plentifully than on any other islands I have seen. The valleys are filled with oranges, bananas, breadfruit, limes and the like, and nowhere else are coconuts as large, heavy, abundant and with meat as thick as on the Marquesas. This being the case, copra—the dried kernel of coconuts—is very plentiful and a principal article of commerce with the Society Islands, seven hundred and fifty miles to the westward.

High above the luxuriant valleys and plateaux of the Marquesas tower picturesque mountains, of which the loftiest we explored are on Nukuhiva and Hiva Oa, and the next highest, on Fatu-Hiva, and Taiohae. Towards the northwest these mountains look down upon tablelands and plains which exhibit much less vegetation than do those which lie on the southeasterly side, where there is more moisture of every kind; more rain, more water in the streams and a more prolific vegetation. These localities are termed "dry" and "wet", respectively, and it is on the wet side of the range, cooled seven months in the year by steady trade winds from the ocean, that most of the population dwells.

I found the climate wonderful and much like that of southern Florida. It agrees with white people, who have lived there for thirty years and are healthy and happy. Among the white residents are the French administrator, his wife, two daughters, his godson, two priests, two Catholic Sisters, and a postmaster. When I left, the islanders were expecting a doctor.

How the Native Lives

Many a connoisseur of rare woods might envy a Marquesan the hardwood with which he makes uprights for most of his residences, and any American home-builder the color with which his rock foundations are erected. Back in mountain fastnesses will be found, today, the ruins of many platforms of these dwellings, abandoned as the population died. Numbers of great rock terraces, overgrown with verdure, rise as monuments to the past, and many of the valleys now have, for sole occupants, flocks of parrot-green doves and colonies of songbirds, while others include only one or, at most, three houses with small families. Few villages remain.

The Marquesan's only bed consists of mats made of pandanus and coconut leaves, which are laid on the floor, and some of the mats are colored with native dyes. Holes in the walls constitute windows and mats are rolled up or unrolled over these, much as we roll window-shades.

By way of floor-covering they spread mats over a surface of gravel, with which they cover the foundations of the house—a stone platform, some four feet above ground, to provide protection from frequent rains.

I was guest at a great farawall feast one evening at the beautiful valleys of Hiva Oa. Gorgeous blossoms hung from the canopy of banana leaves, erected over the feast ground, and shrubbery of many hues had been transplanted around it. We sat on thick pandanus mats and were served from a central mat, overspread with banana leaves to protect its beauty. Girls adorned with flowers danced to the native Hula-Hula with exquisite grace and feeling; melodious native voices sang harmonies of haunting sweetness in a minor key, the most delicious dishes that culinary skill could produce heaped the leaves which served us for plates.

My entertainers accompanied me to the shore and, as my ship shrouded away from the shore, got under way and grunting pigs, clucking hens and fruit were separated from the more permanent presents with which we had been this purpose; sometimes natives build a pergoia, instead of a canopy, and cover that with banana receding shores of this land of unparallel beauty and heard the same broad glistering leaves placed on the floor faintly, sweetly welling across the by way of table, and guests set water the appealing melodies of their primitive native songs.

STEEL INDUSTRY SHOWS NO SIGNS OF SLOWING UP; MANY ORDERS PLACED

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 28.—

Iron Trade Review today said: Six months of remarkable production and prosperity find the steel industry entering the second half of the year with practically undiminished prospects. Most of the more important producers have order books as large as to insure the continuance of present conditions until well into the fourth quarter; some, notably at Chicago, are virtually filled to the year's close. Furthermore, new tonnage is showing a tendency to expand and is expected to develop in increasing volume. The outstanding fact is that consumption has taken up the greatest half-year tonnage of iron and steel, by a considerable margin, ever produced in this country and no signs are yet appearing of a consequential slackening of the total demand, except where normal seasonal influences have had their effect.

The Pennsylvania has placed 15,000 tons and the Reading 10,000 tons of rails. The Illinois Central is inquiring for 80,000 tons and the Erie for 60,000 tons. The New York Central is seeking 7,000 to 8,000 tons of steel for shop needs, the Big Four 1,500 to 2,000 tons for similar purposes and the Pennsylvania has just bought 5,000 tons more.

The 24,000 tons of steel for the Hotel Hetchy aqueduct will be finished by the Steel Corporation and the Bethlehem Steel Co. Iron Trade Review composite of fourteen iron and steel products continues to be put down by the falling pig iron market. This week it is $46.16. Last week it was $46.34. The composite now has declined for seven consecutive weeks.

Steel prices are steady and show no tendency to dip below the Steel Corporation or minimum schedule except in black sheets. The recent purchases of 25,000 tons of sheet bars by the Steel Corporation were above $42.50 but this buyer has been quoted such a price since.

Manufacturing of pig iron producers and consumers for market advantage continues. The volume of inquiry and buying is better though not liberal. Prices still softer.

Dumping by the French in neutral markets of large quantities of coal tar products accumulated from German operations in the Ruhr has reacted unfavorably upon conditions in this country. This interference with the heavy operations of by-product coke works has caused a backing up of supplies of benzol, naphthalene and sublimite of ammonia in the hands of producers and the spot market has weakened sharply.

Young of Lower Animals

Seem to the Observer to Be Strange Little Objects—Baby Giraffe Not Long Helpless.
Recently one of the tortoises at a large city zoo laid 42 eggs and hatched out the first tortoise to be born in the "zoo." At birth he was two inches long and weighed a little over an ounce. His mother was fifty years old when he was hatched out.

Young animals are always very strange little things when first seen. The porcupine is born with its spines, but they are quite soft and pliable. They soon harden when exposed to the air. The puma is born spotted, and has rings on its tail. At six months old his coat becomes tawny in color and his tail loses all its rings.

The tapir is born with curious markings of spots and streaks on his coat. But when he is four months old these all disappear. Some of the young animals have a pretty good time. The woolly opossum of South America gives her youngsters an amount of joy rides, and she will climb trees quite nimbly with as many as 12 of her children clinging tenaciously to her. The young black-necked swan from the same country often gets a ride in his mother's mouth.

The giraffe is one of the blindest animals, even when very tiny. He disdains any carrying on his mother's part, and when he is only three days old will trot gaily along by his mother's side.

Beards Once Were Prized

To Be Without One Was Considered Sign of Effeminacy in Civilization's Early Stages.
Back in the early stages of civilization the clean-shaven man of today, instead of giving the impression of power and strength, "was looked upon as a very effeminate person, an outcast to worth-while society."

All nations in their early development cherished the beard as something almost sacred, a sign of strength and manhood. To lose the beard through an accident or as punishment was as degrading a thing as could befall a man. The beard has been connected with wisdom and long life. Artists have embodied it in their pictures. Most of the Biblical characters, even the first person of the Trinity, is given a beard by old painters and carvers. The oath of the beard is as old as history. It is found in the first English political ballad when Sir Simon De Montfort swears "by the hair on his chin."

Large Supply Needed

Eph Brown was a true believer and food of any religious ceremony. When "de suction" caught him, he became a sort of unofficial chaplain in a colored labor battalion. He worked assiduously among his fellows, and finally persuaded a dozen or so to join him in an open-air baptism on a day in January.

That it was necessary to chop a hole in the river ice to provide a space for immersion rather cooled the ardor of the converts, but not so Eph's. Seizing the nearest soldier, he plunged him beneath the icy water. He had not reckoned the swift current, however, and the luckless victim was snatched out of his hands and carried permanently out of sight.

Eph was not in the least disconcerted. "De Lawd giveth," he intoned, "an' de Lawd taketh away. Bring me anotha privy!"—American Legion Weekly.

Plant a Tree.
Every year we cut in the United States wood enough to measure 28,000,000,000 cubic feet of lumber. Each year we cut over 10,000,000 acres of land. At that rate the last of our merchantable lumber will have been exhausted in between 30 and 40 years. Even now we are approaching the forest bankruptcy. We all know the disasters that follow in the path of such a state of affairs. Trees do not mature in a day. The fact that a timber crop is so long in getting here discourages many from doing their share in the work of reforestation. If the land owner will look but a short distance ahead, he will learn that in planting trees he can turn much waste land into a source of profit and at the same time he will be performing a duty to this country and the human race.—Exchange.

First American-Made Steel.
The first steel produced in the United States, according to the geological survey, Department of the Interior, was probably made in Connecticut in 1728 by Samuel Higley and Joseph Dwyer. Crucible steel was first successfully produced in the United States in 1832 at the works of William and John H. Garrard at Cincinnati. Bessemer steel was first made in this country in September, 1854, by William F. Durfee, at an experimental plant at Wyandotte, Mich., and open-hearth steel in 1854 by the New Jersey Steel and Iron company, at Trenton.

Grizzel Awarded $5,000 Damages; $1,000 "Smart" Money By Jury

A Common Pleas court jury Thursday awarded Harry R. Grizzel, a North Moreland steel worker, $5,000 damages in addition to $1,000 "smart" money in his suit against William Earl Basham, prominent Lakeside, N.W. Boston man, for alienation of the affections of his wife, Sarah Grizzel.

The trial which started Wednesday morning was concluded shortly after court recessed after the noon recess and the case went to the jury following Judge Thomas' general charge. After deliberating a little more than an hour on the case the jury turned its verdict into court. Ord Thompson, McDermott merchant was foreman of the jury and the entire panel concurred in the verdict. Grizzel sued for $25,000 damages.

alleging that Basham not only alienated the affections of his wife, Sarah Grizzel, but that as a result of his associations with the wife persuaded her to abandon him, breaking up his home and destroyed his happiness.

The evidence adduced in the trial was a bit spicy and a number of love letters which Basham admitted writing to Mrs. Grizzel while she was in California, figured prominently in the case.

Mrs. Grizzel, the central figure in the case, was present in court, but was not called to the witness stand by either side. Basham's wife was also an interested spectator at the trial.

Attorneys B. F. Kimble and E. G. Miller represented Grizzel, and Attorney Miller and Searl appeared for Basham.

Teachers Close Convention

CEDAR POINT, O., June 28.—(By the Associated Press)—The annual convention of the Ohio State Teachers' Association, the sessions of which were devoted in a large part to the initiation of a campaign for a revision of the state's taxation system, closed here today with Professor George D. Strayer, of the Columbia University Teachers' College, advocating that distinct changes be made in the methods of obtaining revenue. "The ownership of real estate is not an adequate measure of the ability to pay taxes," Professor Strayer declared in expressing his belief that every person having taxable ability should pay some sort of a direct personal tax.

"We are spending more money for public education now than ever before in our history," said Professor Strayer. "We are not, however, supporting education more generously than in the past."

He said, is off set by the decreased purchasing power of the dollar, and the embarkation into new channels of education. In 1920, he said, the country spent only one and one-half per cent of its annual income for education, the speaker declared, and education must be looked to as "the only possibility of stabilizing our security and of perpetuating our government. Education is an investment which promises large dividends," he said.

The Hanging Gardens of the Marquesas

As Told By Captain Edward A. Salisbury to M. Wilkinson Mount

DROPPING anchor in the Bay of Hiva-oa was like sinking a plummet in some purple-blue jewel of marvelous color and brilliancy, gleaming against towering battlements of green jade.

The canoes that dashed out from the village to meet my ship, the Wisdom II, seemed the only life things in a panorama of dim river-cleft valleys and great peaks covered with tropic vegetation. I was in the heart of the Marquesas Islands, famed among the most exquisite in the South Pacific ocean and as owning the most beautiful native women in that vast expanse of waters.

If the islands formed a picture the natives proved a picture-gallery. From head to foot visitors who came aboard were adorned with barbaric designs. Never have I seen tattooing carried to such a marvelous degree of perfection.

Theirs is no flamboyant splash of colors, but a large square of ground, a "tatuist's" brush, and the acute nervousness of a young man or woman while undergoing the operation does not deter the artist. me; stone, that corner, he b'long operation does not deter the artist. me; stone, that corner, he b'long Kind friends sit on the arms and legs of the quivering victim, while he cut down tree, he roll away the tattooer carefully develops intricate patterns over his tortured skin.

Our guests did not confine their exhibition of native art to their persons, however. The men wore around their hips a pareu of the ornate with large geometrical and floral designs in yellow and white.

"How many people have you?" I asked a chief who had come to welcome us.

His face saddened. He waved his hand towards the far peaks of the islands and shook his head.

"My people are but few," he said. "Before the great canoe came there were many tribes. Many people feasted in the valleys. The great canoe came and they began to die. They died like fish when the streams are dry."

The Phantom Canoe
"White traders brought disease," explained a Marquesan planter. "A tradition has been handed down for generations that the appearance of a phantom canoe landing at the Marquesas signifies an impending calamity. The magnitude of the misfortune is measured by the size of the phantom craft which has never failed to bring its dread warning to these islands."

"The moon was bright on the water," interposed the chief. "My grandfather was in the bay fishing, with his wife, his son and daughters, when he heard the swish of many paddles approaching. He looked and saw the biggest canoe he had ever beheld. It was a hundred man canoe. It swept by them into the harbor. He saw it rest there—a great giant canoe—in the moonlight. Even as they gazed it vanished."

The narrator trembled with excitement. "My grandfather called his people together in the morning and told them that the greatest disaster they had ever known was about to visit them. His warriors prepared for defense in case of attack; the women made ready to store food lest the rains should fall and their coconuts and bread-fruit cease to bear and they die of famine."

"In two days," the planter took up the story, "white men landed on the island. That was seventy years ago and out of eighty thousand natives there are now a bare twenty-five hundred left—and most of those are dying of consumption. Father Oliver declares that in five years not one will be left."

Missionaries put clothes on South Sea Islanders and this kills them. And white traders brought diseases worse than clothes to decimate the race. Strangely enough, white people are not affected by the peculiar diseases that afflict these islands.

On shore I found missionaries who seemed to think the pareu a logical garment for Marquesans, and who sought to teach them the ways of Heaven rather than the fashions of earth, and is was a pareu-clad assemblage who entertained me at a sumptuous repast of roast pig, roasted green doves, delicious taro leaves cooked in grated coconut milk, baked taro root (like yams), bread-fruit, fresh-water crawfish, and many varieties of crustaceans, and salt water fish, prepared in a style our best chefs might envy, and accompanied by coconut milk, squeezed from grated kernels of nuts.

We were taken to see magnificent plantations of coconut and fruit trees.

Beyond and above the plump expanse of coconut plantations rose great jagged green peaks that lured me to explore.

They were flecked with color of blossom and bird; wild goats bleated from jutting crags; wild crows lowed to their young, deep in luxuriant vegetation; parrot-green pigeons invited a flying Marquesan arrow; there was no sign of beasts of prey, only the mountains were formidable. Native trails that led to fastnesses where mountain bananas grew and the green doves-homed, appeared impassable.

A Baffling Peak
I have penetrated many a difficult jungle but the peaks of Hiva-oa baffled me. Our native escort, however, proved expert at mountain climbing. Marquesans are as sure-footed as the llamas of Peru. While we sought some sort of footing, natives sprang ahead and presently we saw them traversing ledges where a mountain goat could not have gone.

"They hold their lives cheaply!" I exclaimed.

My guide smiled. "That is nothing," he declared.

signs on the dry finished fabric. Marquesans have few wants and supply those outside the island by trading, principally copra, which is sought by the Society Islands, six hundred miles away.

To these far places the Marquesans were wont to sail in their primitive canoes. These are formed by hollowing out a log by means of fire and shaping it with an adz.

They hoist a sail and go on long journeys of trade and adventure in these small craft. Now the Marquesan often makes his long journey in an American whaleboat, and he employs modern tools in his boat-making, and uses oars instead of paddles in these modern crafts.

Like the Paumotuans, insecurely perched on their coral atolls, the Marquesans are experts at going through the surf, and both men and women sport themselves like fish in the water. It is difficult for white people to comprehend the unthinking generosity of the Marquesas Islanders.

Like Bright-Plumaged Birds
I found the Marquesans of a distinctly Caucasian order, sun-burned. They are of the Polynesian type, neither yellow nor negroid, and every day. I saw a man or a woman who reminded me of some one at home.

Through the assistance of white residents on the island, of which there were about a dozen with some twenty half-breeds, it became quite easy to get the belles of the Marquesas to consent to have their pictures taken. My camera-men, at their moving picture cameras, waited for them to take their all-most hourly dip in the sea, when

What the Natives Eat
With the moist cool trade breezes from the Pacific blowing ripples over numberless streams it was hard to realize that droughts have visited these islands about every twenty years when, for a year or more, neither bread-fruit nor coconut trees bore fruit and much of the foodstuff on which the natives depended was blighted.

"It was during one of these visitations," Rev. Father Oliver told me, "that the tribes buried bread-fruit for use during famine. The mass would ferment but did they leaped gracefully in the water, feet first, disported themselves like fish in its translucent depths, slipped off their one garment—the pareu while underneath the waves, and washed it in the fresh water stream into which they always go after a salt dip. In this fresh water they rinse themselves, their masses of long black hair, and their pareu. This strip of calico dries in the sun in about a minute when the woman comes out modestly clad before the public.

Out of the water they tripped and spread themselves, like bright-plumaged birds, upon the sands to dry. Their pareus, decorated with yellow flowers and foliage on a red-dyed background, made them look like a flock of roosting flamingoes.

"What is that for?" I asked one of my new acquaintances, indicating a scarlet hibiscus worn over the right ear of a young girl.

"She wants to be married," came the information. "If she wears the flower over her left ear she is not looking for a mate. The same thing applies to a young man, and this signal of courtship simplifies matters for everybody. A swain doesn't waste his time courting the wrong girl and a maiden does not primp up for an indifferent man."

The status of women has changed little in spite of thirty years of Christian teachings. The Marquesan has accepted Christianity, but he weaves its precepts into his own understanding of what is right, and no one respects him the less because of his ideas. He believes that it is right that women should be the property of man, and he lives up to this belief. And, so far as I could see, there was no opposition to the old order of things on the part of women, who are much potted by men and exercise entire freedom in sex relations.

How the Marquesans Dance
The impulse to dance seems to have been born in South Sea Island races and I found their dances as different as their appearance from one another. In some localities men and women do not dance together, but the Hula-Hula of the Marquesas is a sex dance in which both men and women take part.

Beneath the trees we watched the lines of dancers sway this way and that; now forward and backward, spread with beautifully carved dishes, bowls and platters from native hardwoods.

Contrary to civilized custom the feast is left to the women and children. Afterwards, dogs eat what they want, and last the pigs are let in and clean up everything. Nothing is stored away for the next day.

The Death Feast
Of all feasts observed by the Marquesans the death-feast is by far the most prominent and remarkable of any I have seen. It is arranged by the man in whose honor it will be held at some day set by him, and when he is, and seems to be, in perfect health. A native makes up his mind that he will die on—say, Friday. He does not believe that he will go to Heaven unless a suitable death-feast is provided, and he believes in personal supervision of an affair of such importance to his future. So he sends out word to friends that they are appointed to kill cattle and goats for the occasion; women are dispatched to catch fish; boys, to spear fish under water; others are set to work gathering food of every sort and, having set in motion everything essential for a great banquet, he then superintends the digging of his grave.

Seldom does a man act as host at his own funeral feast. He invariably dies in the morning of the appointed day and his plans are carried out to the last detail. If, by some miscarriage of fate, the man does not die until a day or two after the time he designates, his wishes are carried out anyway. The feast is held, he presides over it, the funeral takes place, and everything he owns is distributed with equity. To all intents and purposes he is dead and entitled to his place in the little graveyard on the hillside. At least ninety per cent of the men who decide that they are going to die on a fixed date do die on time and with no apparent reason for doing so.

All the tropical fruits grow in the Marquesas in more varieties and more plentifully than on any other islands I have seen. The valleys are filled with oranges, bananas, breadfruit, limes and the like, and nowhere else are coconuts as large, heavy, abundant and with meat as thick as on the Marquesas. This being the case, copra—the dried kernel of coconut—is very plentiful and a principal article of commerce with the Society Islands, seven hundred and fifty miles to the westward.

High above the luxuriant valleys and plateaus of the Marquesas tower picturesque mountains, of which the loftiest we explored are on Nukuhiva and Hiva-oa, and the next highest on Fatu-Hiva and Tautua. Towards the northwest these mountains look down upon tablelands and plains which exhibit much less vegetation than do those which lie on the southeast-erly side, where there is more moisture of every kind; more rain, more water in the streams and a more prolific vegetation. These localities are termed "dry" and "wet", respectively, and it is on the wet side of the range, cooled seven months in the year by steady trade winds from the ocean, that most of the population dwells.

I found the climate wonderful and much like that of southern Florida. It agrees with white people, who have lived there for thirty years and are healthy and happy. Among the white residents are the French administrator, his wife, two daughters, his grandsons, two priests, two Catholic Sisters, and a postmaster. When I left, the islanders were expecting a doctor.

How the Native Lives.
Many a connoisseur of rare woods might envy a Marquesan the hardwood with which he makes uprights for most of his residences, and any American home-builder the celerity with which his rock foundations are erected. Back in mountain fastnesses will be found, today, the ruins of many platforms of these dwellings, abandoned as the population died. Numbers of great rock terraces, overgrown with verdure, rise as monuments to the past, and many of the valleys now have, for sole occupants, flocks of parrot-green doves and colonies of songbirds, while others include only one or, at most, three houses with small families. Few villages remain.

The Marquesans' only bed consists of mats made of pandanus and coconut leaves, which are laid on the floor, and some of the mats are colored with native dyes. Holes in the walls constitute windows and mats are rolled up or unrolled over these, much as we roll window-shades.

By way of floor-covering they spread mats over a surface of gravel, with which they cover the foundations of the house—a stone platform, some four feet above ground, to provide protection from frequent rains.

I was guest at a great farewell feast ere sailing away from the beautiful valleys of Hiva-oa. Gorgeous blossoms hung from the canopy of banana leaves, erected over the feast ground, and shrubbery of many hues had been transplanted around it. We sat on thick pandanus mats and were served from a central mat, over-spread with banana leaves to protect its beauty. Girls adorned with flowers danced the native Hula-Hula with exquisite grace and feeling; melodious native voices sang harmonies of haunting sweetness in a minor key, the most delicious dishes that culinary skill could produce heaped the leaves which served us for plates.

My entertainers accompanied me to the shore and, as my ship got under way and grunting pigs, sometimes natives presents with which we had been served from a central mat, over-

DEMPSEY'S THIRD INSTALLMENT NOT IN SIGHT; FIGHT HANGS IN BALANCE

Manager Of Scrap Turns In Resignation

GREAT FALLS, Mont., June 28.—Prospects of holding the Jack Dempsey-Tom Gibbons heavyweight championship fight at Shelby July 4 today revolved around Jack Kearns, manager of the world's champion, who returned to Great Falls bringing with him Mayor Jim Johnson of Shelby, treasurer of the American Legion committee promoting the championship battle.

The resignation of Dan Tracy, pioneer Great Falls mining man and hotel owner, from the position as manager of the business end of the fight, cast a shadow over the situation with the prospect of meeting the final $100,000 installment due Dempsey on his $300,000 guarantee. Tracy said he had been unable to make any headway toward collecting the $17,000 subscribed by Great Falls business men to complete the second $100,000 installment paid Dempsey on June 16.

Mayor Johnson of Shelby declared retirement of Tracy would not interfere with holding the fight.

Kearns is under contract to receive $300,000 as Dempsey's guarantee with no money in sight to meet the final installment of $100,000. He already has been paid $210,000. He declared his willingness to go through with the fight no matter what the expense receipts may be.

The impression prevails here today that unless Kearns decides to "go along" with Mayor Johnson of Shelby and gamble for the $100,000 due him, the show cannot possibly be held. The money is not due Kearns until next Monday.

Dempsey, it is known, is ready to fight Gibbons for the $300,000 he has already received, but his wishes in this regard are not given much consideration because of his inclination to abide by the final decision of Manager Kearns. Kearns, previous to Tracy's resignation repeatedly said that he would not allow Dempsey to go into the ring unless he received the full $300,000 due him.

"A contract is a contract with me," Kearns said and I am going to see that it is fulfilled. These promoters knew what they signed when they made the contract and I cannot be held responsible for their failure to meet their obligations."

A last minute effort to save the show was made this morning by John O'Neill, one of the largest contributors to the second $100,000 paid Kearns. O'Neill announced that certain middle-western interests had asked him to state the exact amount of money needed to make the payment of the third installment possible. If O'Neill is successful in his attempt to raise the necessary money, Dan Tracy will again resume direction of the show, O'Neill said.

CINCINNATI, June 28.—Tut Jackson, Washington C. H., negro heavyweight and Jamaica Kid, New York, boxed 12 rounds to a draw.

Team Reorganizes

At a meeting of the Rosemont Athletic club last night the basketball nine was reorganized with Ben H. Allen as manager. Jimmy Roberts was chosen as field captain and arrangements were made for next Sunday's double header with the Wheelersburg and Wingfoot aggregations on the Rosemont diamond.

A large crowd is expected to be out for the games Sunday as the Wingfoot nine is composed mostly of P. H. S. players and the Wheelersburg team is reputed to be one of the strongest junior teams in this section.

The first game will start promptly at 1 o'clock with Sister, the Ironton star, on the mound for Wheelersburg. No admission will be charged for either of the games.

Gibbons Is Working In The Open

(BY TOM GIBBONS)
[Challenger For Heavyweight Title (Copyright, 1923 by King Features Incorporated)]

SHELBY, Mont., June 28.—In order to work under conditions that will prevail in the arena on the day of the fight, I have removed the roof from the ring of my camp and hereafter will box with no protection from the rays of the sun. The experiment was attempted for the first time yesterday and apparently it was not a minute too soon. The hot sun got to me as I was working out with Willie Kid Herman in the final bout of the day and I noticed that it was sapping my strength. In the future, I will let the sun get to me as much as possible.

I have been down at the ringside for the arena on a warm day and believe me that place is an inferno. The structure is pitched in a natural hollow, to begin with, and the tiers of seats make matters worse by shutting off any stray current of air that might be about. Turn the sun on a proposition like that and you have the hottest spot this side of the equator.

However, I think I did well to keep my ring covered until about a week before the fight. I will need all my speed and vitality when the bell rings and several weeks spent in training under a hot summer sun will soon separate a fighter from these assets. I have seen it happen too many times before to fail a victim to this mistake. Many a fighter has gone into the ring utterly without pep and the strength to land a real punch just because he left all of his vitality in the sweat of his training camp.

Another thing that I had to be careful of was my weight. Jack Dempsey, pound for pound, is one of the strongest heavyweights that ever appeared before the public. He has both speed and strength in abundance, using the first to get close, the second to weaken his opponent in the fighting. Usually, I weigh about 175 pounds for men like Greb, Miske and others of that type but for Dempsey I expect to scale around 182. It is said his best fighting weight is 192 pounds, so that the discrepancy in weightage will be of slight importance.

Most of Jack's weight is in his arms and shoulders. Mine is more evenly distributed. In fact, my shoulders look small compared to his. There are other things to be considered besides shoulders, however. For

Classy Field For Latonia Derby

LATONIA, Ky., June 28.—A field of ten or twelve thoroughbreds for the Latonia Derby seems assured, despite the injuries suffered in training gallops yesterday which caused the withdrawal of Zev. Zev Lerner and Chickadee. Zev looked like a sure winner, although being asked to go farther than he had ever gone before. It was because of the long stretch of a mile and half that Kentuckians believed they had a chance to beat the Rancocas stables star.

With everybody at sea as to the winner, the Clow, from the Audley Stock Farm stable, was given a trial over the full Derby route and covered it in 2:33 8-5. Horsemen who saw the effort expressed the opinion that the Clow would be a hard horse to beat in Saturday's classic and that he would trim at least some of the eastern starters.

TWO BIG SERIES ARE OPENED

NEW YORK, June 28.—Two series of absorbing interest open in the major leagues today, one between New York and Philadelphia for first place in the American league and the other between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati for second place in the National league. The former is of four and the latter of three contests.

The Reds are but two games behind the Pirates, while the Athletics are only five behind the Yankees.

9,492 Motor Vehicles Listed In County

In a statement received yesterday at the Chamber of Commerce from Thad H. Brown, Secretary of State, it was estimated that there are approximately 9,492 motor vehicles in Scioto County. Of this number 8407 are passenger cars and 1085 are trucks.

In 1920 there were 3,006 passenger cars registered in the county and 561 trucks, making a total of 4467. In 1921 there were 3275 passenger cars and 709 trucks, a total of 5984. Last year there were 6801 passenger cars and 916 trucks, a total of 7717. A complete record of machines in the county for 1923 has not been made but the number given has been estimated upon the average increase each year.

Compromise Effectuated; Flint Released

THE PITY OF IT

Many cities more actively is being displayed in arrests for violation of traffic ordinances and the courts are becoming more severe in the penalties imposed.
The automobile tempts, it would seem, to carelessness and recklessness, it breeds lawlessness. Youngstown gives a striking illustration of this. There a vigorous effort has been put forth to compel observance of regulations. The municipal court has given its good arm to the support of the police. Stiff fines have been imposed, licenses to drive have been taken away and even jail sentences given, yet on Monday last, supposedly for acts of the day before, the police rounded up 154 and charged them with traffic violations.
Study the operation of automobiles, on any lively street, and you'll be convinced that the machine is not nearly so dangerous as it is popularly accounted. Scarcely a near accident that is not the outcome of careless or reckless driving on the part of one or more. Eliminate carelessness and recklessness and automobiles would become quite as safe as a baby buggy.
It is, however, going to take a long and stern drive by the authorities and eternal vigilance to get operations of automobiles on a sane and safe basis.
The result to be achieved is, however, worth all the effort it will require. Let 50 persons be killed in a storm and the whole country shrieks in horror through flaming newspaper headlines. Every day almost, that many are slaughtered by automobiles and the world is not even interested.
Ponder upon the pity of it, fifteen thousand lives, children crossing the street, mothers out to buy food, fathers coming home from work, are crushed, mangled, dead, because no heed was taken. Think of that every moment you sit at the wheel.

RELAXING FROM THE STRAIN

Two tired ex-congressmen, on a junketing trip, to the Canal zone by grace of the United States navy, donned the flapping regalia of regular seamen and fared forth to see the sights. According to press reports they saw everything, including the municipal jail, where they were stowed away because they forgot that their passes provided that they should return to their ship before 11 o'clock.
The case is one to arouse pity. Congressmen in office, of course, would indulge in no such silly pastime, for the dignity of the high station would not permit of masquerading in the streets of a foreign city, and of risking the likelihood of being thrown into jail as excitement-seeking coal heavers.
But with an ex-congressman the case is different. Worn to a frazzle by the burdens of public service, mind tired, body weary, nerves on edge, an ex-congressman most naturally reverts to relaxations as grotesque and silly as those of the school-boy on the first day of the summer vacation.
It is especially understandable that a congressman who has left the public service after two years in the sixty-seventh congress should feel like a sailor on shore leave. He has been riding on a sea of words for a long time.

President Harding makes a claim unworthy of his high office when he lauds his own administration and its budget system for saving a surplus of $110,000,000 for the year ending July 1st. When the fact is that the treasury department estimated receipts at so many billion and million dollars and the budget and congress were governed by that estimate, but the receipts ran seven hundred millions over the estimate. It can't be seen where spending six hundred millions more than you calculated on receiving is much of a performance in saving.

Missouri has the most rigid prohibition laws of any state. St. Louis is in Missouri, but it doesn't let a little thing like prohibition bother it at all.

What's this, what's this! Westerners pressing for a government stabilizing price on wheat at least $1.50. Wheat is now $1.04. Well now, did you ever? Just four years ago the government had a stabilizing price of $2.26. Wheat was then selling at $2.33. Westerners said if the stabilized price were taken off it would go up to $3.00. They all voted for Harding so they could watch the ascension. They didn't see it. Wheat immediately dropped down, down until now it is $1.04, we repeat. It is going lower than that just as soon as the harvesting of the present crop is begun.

New York-Day-By-Day

BY O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 28—The gayest cafes these days are in the glumest neighborhoods. Beyond Ninth Avenue in the Forties is a fading brown stone front. The street is almost pitch-black at night and the pungent odors from the gas house assails the nostrils.
There is no sign of life or light in the house. There is a side grilled door and a press at the push button brings a guard. One must be known. There are three doors to be opened by a series of raps and the final door reveals a huge, dazzling cafe.
It is a throw back to the old days of the table d'hôte where the spaghetti had a permanent wave and the chianti was covered with dust. Cocktails are shaken up at the table and red and white wine flow as freely as water.

Like the old days, too, there is that slick, freshly barbered young man who is invariably known as Eddie. He has a suffocating air of worldliness and you know instinctively that, despite his hail fellowship, he is handy with his fists.
Even those who are known are not permitted to enter if they arrive in taxis. A stream of taxicabs reveals hide-aways to the police. At each table is a card asking visitors to arrive by foot and "thus protect us in giving you a real dinner place."
I was told in case of a raiding ram attacking the door the place could be cleared of liquor in ten minutes. The diners were mostly in evening clothes and a rather conspicuous gathering—a sugar millionaire, two stage stars, and a poet of fame.

Read A Little Every Day

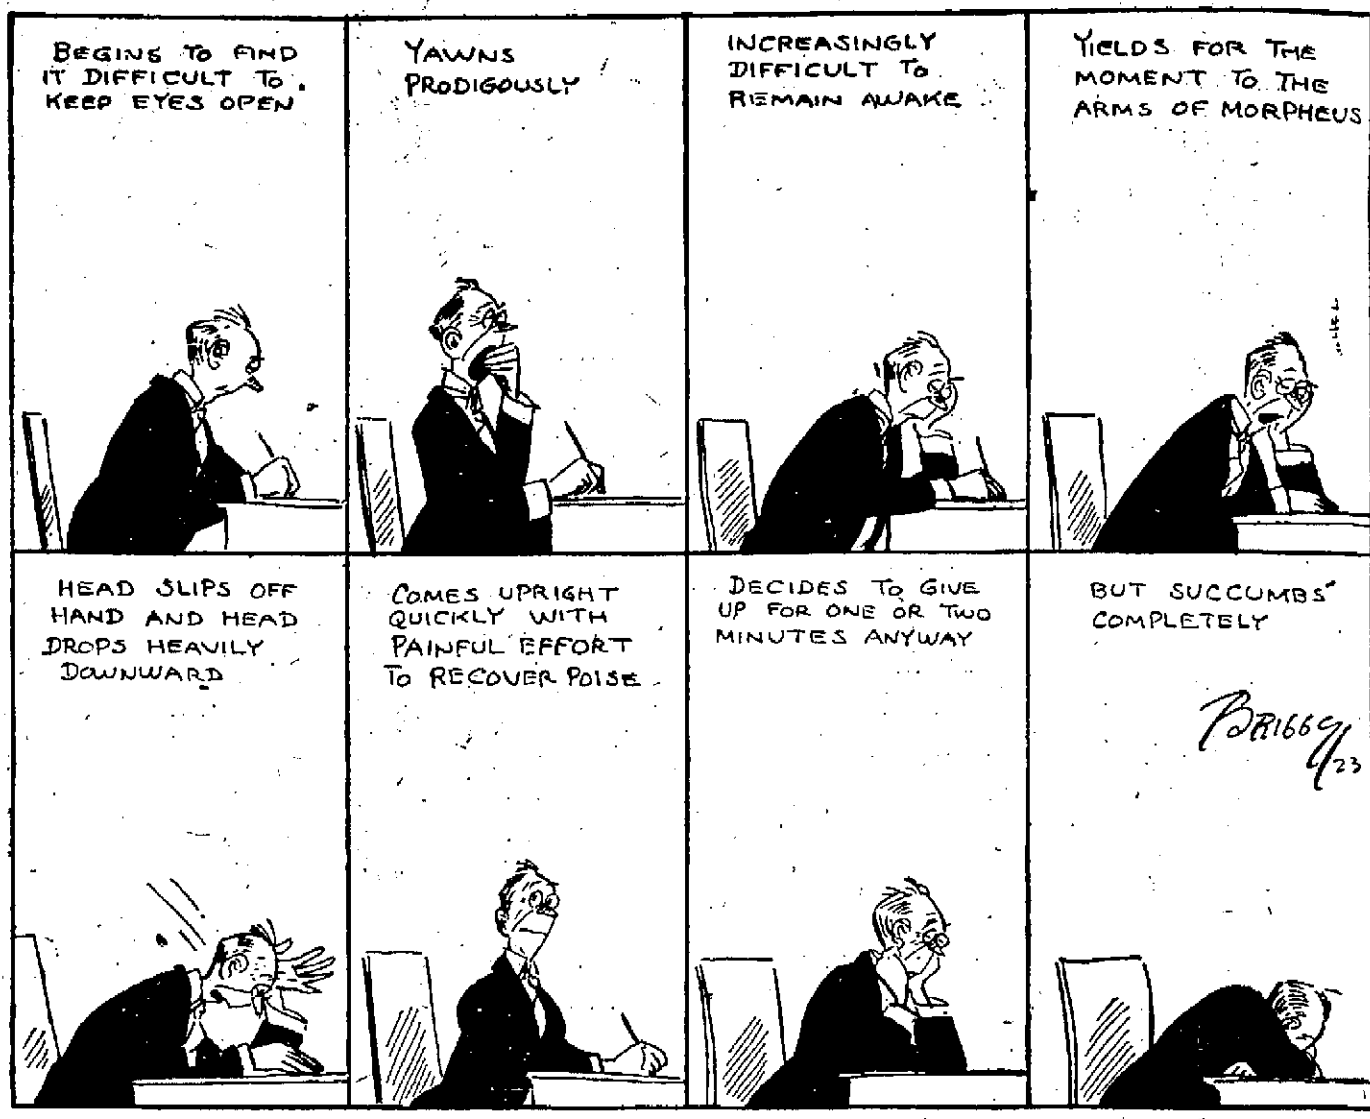

I knew a man
Of great legal learning,
A corporation lawyer
Whose services
Won for him large fees.
With his fellows and his family
He lived like a prince.
He loved his career, his home, his friends.
But he had one poignant regret:
That all his time was consumed
In counseling with clients
And pleading their cases,
And in the courtesies of love and friendship,
He longed for hours alone
When he could open the storehouses
Of the world's knowledge
And take what he would.
"Some day,"
He prompted himself, "I shall retire
And read."
So he bought many elegant books
Filled with the stories of nations,
And Science, art, literature—
A library of achievements
But his lines of human activity
He worked on, and on, till one day.
Death came.
And he went away, leaving the pages
Of all his beautiful books
Uncut.
The moral: Trust nothing to "some day."
Read a little every day.
As you go along.
—Biblio Phil.
